Fleet's Planes Blast 128 Jap Ships

SHELL STEEL CITY 2D DAY; FIRE 1,000 TONS AT PORT

No Defense Offered by Enemy from Air or Sea

GUAM, July 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Struck anew by more than 1,000 tons of naval shells, Japan's industrial port of Muroran on Hokkaido belched tremendous explosions as the fleet bombardment continued yesterday, Adm. Nimitz announced today.

The enemy offered no defense, either aerial or naval, he said, to this second day's assaults on the home islands by 16 inch broadsides and carrier plane strikes.

The Japanese losses in the two day attack by warships and carrier planes raiding the strait between Honshu and Hokkaido were given as follows:

Vessels sunk: 64 totaling 53,000 tons.

Vessels damaged: 64 totaling 55,000 tons.

Planes destroyed: 28 on the ground, one in the air.

Planes damaged: 63 on the ground.

Locomotives destroyed: 27.

Five Cities Blasted

Cities hit: Kushiro on Honshu, burned out; Hakodate on Hckkaido, rail and shipping facilities knocked out; Kamaishi on Honshu, steel mills and harbor works set afiame; Esashi on Hokkaido, rail yards smashed; Muroran on Kokkaido, two steel mills, chemical works, warehouses and other industries set afire and exploded.

United States losses: Nine planes and three crew members.

Super Fortresses from the Marianas joined the coördinated blasting of the empire with a 50 to 75 plane bombing of a major Honshu oil refinery at Kudamatsu.

Despite "widespread destruction" caused by the fleet's blasting and air strikes, "the action of these forces brought no defensive response from the enemy in the air or on the surface thruout the day," the bulletin reported.

Muroran's Nihon steel plant and Wanishi iron works were exploding and afiame after yesterday's cyclone of 16 inch shells from the battleships Missouri, Iowa, and Wisconsin burst upon the city, formerly untouched by war.

Nine Big Ships Sunk

Reports of yesterday's carrier plane blows at northern Honshu and Hokkaido—again hampered by adverse weather—showed nine enemy ships and six small craft totaling 12,000 tons were sunk and nine ships and 30 small craft were damaged during the early morning hours.

[Ten Super Forts flew over central Honshu last night and early this morning, Japanese time, and eight of them dropped mines in the Japan sea, Tokyo radio reported in a Japanese-language broadcast.]

INFERNO HURLED FROM GUNS TOLD BY EYEWITNESS

BY RICHARD O'MALLEY

ABOARD BATTLESHIP IOWA, off Hokkaido, July 15 (AP)—Knifing boldly inshore where the rugged hills of Muroran are plainly visible, this American battleship and others of a bombardment group mercilessly pounded the great Nihon steel works and the Wanishi iron mills today.

At 9:37 a. m. this ship turned loose the first salvo. A thunderous blast came from the gray guns pointing like deadly fingers at the shore. In a moment other battleships joined in the bombardment. The firing continued for 58 minutes.

A blob of smoke rose after the first salvo hit Point Muroran, which is like many promontories on the Oregon and Washington coast of the United States.

Hook Shaped Bay

Our planes covering the sky were reassuring as the ships went into the area surrounded on three sides by enemy land. The Muroran area is shaped like a big pruning hook, with the target located about at the start of the curve. The battleships drew in daringly close.

The ship's battle flag, flown only once before, fluttered from the Iowa's masthead. Flame and brown smoke leaped from the guns. Audible above the fierce bellowing of the big guns was the bustle of shells, sounding like giants shaking their coats in the sky.

This ship fired scores of shells. Each weighed 2,700 pounds. The ship barrage totaled more than 810 high explosive projectiles divided between the Nihon steel and the Wanishi Iron works.

Terrifying Assault

It was terrifying enough even aboard the battleship. The guns seemed to shake the sea and sky. It must have caused an inferno ashore. The Japanese must have cringed under the steel cloudburst.

Thru binoculars the shore became startlingly close, and a thin column of what appeared to be white smoke rose from a plant set in the depression between two low hills.

Our gunners were right on the mark and got repeated "no change, no change" reports from observers, who meant that the range was right on the target and the shells were dropping where they would do the most damage.

Damage Everywhere

The ship's officers reported the plants were "thoroly worked over, with damage everywhere."

Terrific explosions sounded from the Nihon works, followed by flames spurting 300 feet upward. Fires broke out everywhere in the big shops. Much damage also was inflicted along the waterfront, where coaling docks are located.

TELL OF KAMAISHI RAID

BY RICHARD O'MALLEY

WITH THE 3D FLEET OFF JAPAN, July 13 [Delayed]—(AP)—The first salvos from United States battleships and cruisers bombarding the Japanese main islands today landed squarely in the center of the imperial steel works at Kamaishi.

"A big column of smoke rose from the plant," said Lt. Samuel S. Hutchins of St. Augustine, Fla., pilot of one of the 1,000 planes.

"We got a little anti-aircraft fire over Kamaishi," Hutchins said, "but after the first salvo from the ships it stopped. Smoke from the plant areas rose to about 8,000 feet."

Describing the warships' firing on Kamaishi, Lt. McDonell Tyre of Savannah, Ga., piloting an observation plane, said that "after the first hour we flew at 4,000 feet beneath a billowing smoke blanket. It looked like somebody had drawn a big black curtain in between the mountains."

"Those ships just steamed leisurely up and down the coast firing at will," the flyer declared. "There were ships in the harbor and one vessel which was trying to get out was straddled by shells."

Tyre, grinning, said, "Those Japs didn't do anything but just take it. They hardly fired a pistol at us."

DISPUTE OF UNIONS HALTS REPAIR OF WAR DAMAGED SHIPS

San Francisco, Cal., July 15 [Special]—Repair work on nine battle damaged ships in two yards in the San Francisco bay region remained stalled today as a result of an AFL-CIO dispute over union jurisdiction.

Work was halted Friday on eight ships at the General Engineering yards in Oakland and on one ship at the Western Pipe and Steel yards in San Francisco when 874 AFL workers quit their jobs. They asserted that all work in the yards is under AFL jurisdiction, but that subcontractors are employing CIO labor on ship scaling jobs.

The 874 men are still working at the yards but not on ships where CIO scalers are at work.

An estimated 1,500 welders, burners, chippers, and electricians were affected by the work stoppage.

Arrest Nurse with Kidnaped Boy in Tavern

Mrs. Velma Arnold, 21, of 1246 N. Bell av., a "26 girl" in a Clark st. tavern, yesterday was reunited with her son, William Lee Arnold, 17 months old, who was taken from the Arnold home July 6 by Mrs. Mary McDowell, 26, a former nurse.

The reunion occurred at a noisy meeting of the two women in the detective bureau, at which Mrs. Arnold shouted:

"I'll tear her limb from limb; no one will be able to recognize her."

Found In Loop Tavern

Police kept the two women apart. A short time previously, they had found Mrs. McDowell and the baby in a tavern at 24 W. Van Buren st. The baby was seated on a dice table at which Mrs. McDowell's companion, a soldier, was playing the 26 game.

Mrs. McDowell expressed indignation at her arrest. She said she met Mrs. Arnold on a street car July 6 and that Mrs. Arnold told her she didn't know what she could do if she could not find some one to take care of her child.

"When I told her I'd take care of the baby for her, I gave her $20 and she told me I could have the baby for good," she said. "She gave me a note telling her mother I was to have the baby and then invited me to have a drink with her in the tavern where she works at 701 N. Clark st."

Story of Husband's Death

Mrs. McDowell said she took the note to Mrs. Arnold's mother, Mrs. Frances Mefford, who gave her the child. Mrs. McDowell took him home, she said, and subsequently spent two nights with the baby in her apartment at 1851 Lincoln av., one night in the Planter's hotel on N. Clark st., and the rest of the time with a soldier in a south side hotel.

Mrs. McDowell told police that her husband, Lt. Richard McDowell, died three months ago in Vaughan General hospital. Authorities at Vaughan General hospital said no patient by that name ever had entered the hospital.

Mrs. McDowell demanded that Mrs. Arnold return the $20, but Mrs. Arnold denied ever receiving the money. Police ordered both women held without charge and sent the baby to St. Vincent's orphanage.

Mrs. McDowell subsequently became ill and was removed to County hospital and Mrs. Arnold was released.

LAST BOER SURVIVOR OF GREAT TREK OF 1837 TO BE 115 TOMORROW

VRYHEID, Natal, July 15 [Reuters]—Peter Chandler Pringle, the last living voortrekker [original settler], whose father acted as schoolmaster to the children who took part in the great trek to form the Orange Free State over 100 years ago, will be 115 years old on Tuesday.

Asked to what he ascribed his great age he said: "Honey, mealies [ears of corn], and fresh air." He only recently stopped smoking his pipe.

His memory goes back to 1837, when his family trekked from Cradock, Cape Colony, to the Orange Free State.

ICE CREAM MAN FROZEN IN HIS REFRIGERATOR

Stamford, Conn., July 15 [Special]—Saul H. Perry, owner of an ice cream company, today was found trapped and frozen to death in the subzero refrigerating room of the plant.

Perry apparently had forgotten when he went into the room late this morning that the lock on the door was undergoing repairs which prevented the door from being opened from the inside.

There was no one in the plant to hear his cries or his rapping on the door and walls of the room, where the temperature is kept at 40 degrees below zero.

3 of Family Burn to Death in Car; 6 Hurt

Three members of a Willow Springs family were trapped in their automobile and burned to death last night after a collision with another car at 131st st. and Wolf rd., Palos township.

Six other persons were injured, including two who were rescued from the burning car.

The dead are George E. Husch, 45, of 8700 Archer av., driver of the car; his wife, Elvira, 43, and Husch's mother, Alvina, about 65. The Husch couple's children, Janice, 14, and Donald, 18, who was severely burned, were pulled thru windows of the car before the fire prevented rescuers from saving the other occupants.

Gas Tank Ignited

Witnesses reported that Husch was driving south on Wolf rd. when his car collided with a westbound automobile on 131st st. driven by Bernard Benson, 54, of 7516 Rhodes av. The impact overturned the Husch car and ignited the gasoline tank immediately.

Donald told state police that his father drove across 131st st. without halting at a stop sign.

Occupants of both vehicles, stunned, were unable to assist one another. Among the first rescuers were Thomas Hays and Roy Criter, farmers near the intersection, who reported the collision had jammed doors of the Husch car. The girl and her brother were lifted thru shattered windows.

Driven Back by Fire

Hays and Griter said they reached one of the women, too, but were unable to pull her thru a window before the fire drove them back. Palos township firemen arrived too late to save the trapped occupants.

Benson, a steamfitter, and three other men in his car, all employed in Lockport, were injured. They are Thomas McGinley, 45, of 721 W. 76th st., left arm fractured; Matthew Higgins, 46, of 8601 Justine st., and Joseph Higgins, 45, of 6833 Green st., both cut.

The four men and the Husch car survivors were taken to Oak Forest infirmary. Suffering from shock and hysteria, the Husch girl was not able to tell state police investigators any details of the accident.

EXPECT TRUMAN TO PUSH STALIN ON JAP STAND

Length of Conflict Hangs on Issue

Hint Developments

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, July 16 [Monday]—"London diplomats are convinced the Big Three meeting will bring developments in the war against Japan," the Daily Express said in a front page article this morning. The article said that "Russia may be about to enter the war as a combatant or a 'friendly neutral.'" The Express hinted Russia may grant bases to the United States and Britain. The Daily Mail also saw signs that the Jap war will be discussed by British chiefs of staff accompanying Prime Minister Churchill to Potsdam.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., July 15—As the Potsdam conference of the Big Three gets under way the chief interest in official Washington pertains to its bearing upon the war against Japan. Upon the developments at this meeting will depend the remaining length of the conflict in the Pacific.

It is not doubted that the question of the Pacific war will arise and will figure prominently in the Potsdam discussions, despite the fact that Russia is still at peace with Japan. Russian Dictator Stalin declined to participate in the Cairo conference in 1943 because it related solely to the far eastern war.

It is no secret, however, that a similar excuse by Stalin at Potsdam will not sit well with President Truman. The President is expected by his intimates to exhibit his native Missouri "show me" attitude toward the soviet dictator on this question. They will be greatly surprised if he does not ask Stalin pretty bluntly his intentions with regard to the war against Japan.

Second Front Possible

The participation of Russia in the far eastern war would establish a second front against Japan, relieve the burden of the conflict being borne virtually alone by the United States and hasten victory over the sole remaining axis enemy.

Stalin notified Japan last spring of termination of the neutrality treaty between Moscow and Tokyo and based the action on Japan's aid to Russia's enemies. He had already characterized Japan as an aggressor.

Mr. Truman has indicated on at least one occasion the feeling that the time has come for Stalin to fish or cut bait. If he lives up to what his friends expect of him the President at Potsdam will make a strong demand on Stalin for a second front against Japan.

Price May Be Stiff

Of course, there are complications. It is fully expected that Stalin will hold out for a stiff price for his help against Japan. The price is likely to be Russian control of Manchuria and Korea. But at the Cairo conference Churchill and Roosevelt promised the restoration of Manchuria to China and the independence of Korea.

Whatever the outcome of the discussions with Stalin it is regarded not unlikely that the President and Churchill will issue a pronouncement at Potsdam or soon thereafter further defining the unconditional surrender demand upon Japan. Such a statement would be designed to satisfy the widespread sentiment in this country and Great Britain that our war objectives should not extend beyond the attainment of security from future attack by Japan.

Two Schools of Thought

The principal question at issue is whether the Japs are to be permitted to retain their form of government headed by their godemperor. On the one hand are those who contend for the destruction of the monarchy and the execution of the emperor as the only effective measure for extirpation of the threat of Japanese militarism. On the other are those who believe that effective security can be attained without interfering with the Japanese religion of emperor worship for which the Japs would fight to the last ditch.

GI'S CONJURE UP LUXURIES FOR POTSDAM CHIEFS

POTSDAM, Germany, July 15 (AP)—Nearly 4,000 GI's helped to get Potsdam ready for the Big Three. Among other jobs, they converted German homes into everything from restaurants to radio stations.

Drawn from Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks' Berlin occupation troops, the Americans put up new buildings, hauled in 4,000 blankets and set up luxury installations for food and drink.

The output of one suburban ice plant was reserved exclusively for the Potsdam conferees.

Two quartermaster corps dieticians conferred on the conference menus, which will include lettuce hearts, melons, and choice meat cuts stored until needed in two 10 ton mobile refrigerators.

What'll You Have?

When President Truman offers his Soviet and British friends a drink there will be a wide choice available—Scotch, gin, bourbon, and vodka, Moselle and other wines, cognac, curacao and creme de menthe.

[The American army transported 20 electric refrigerators from Great Britain to Potsdam and a variety of other items, including 20 lawn mowers, 50 vacuum cleaners and 150 alarm clocks, American Broadcasting company correspondent, Donald Coe, reported from Berlin.]

Fourteen truckloads of furniture owned by the former nazi gauleiter of Halle were hauled into the "Little White House," which will be occupied by Mr. Truman.

Capt. Thomas V. Ryan of Syracuse, N. Y., was credited with locating the furnishings which include matched white maple bedroom and drawing room suites, broadloom rugs, ultra-modern lamps and bric-a-brac. The gauleiter committed suicide before the United States army entered Halle.

Like a Summer Resort

The scene of the Big Three meeting, a former castle of Kaiser Wilhelm, is "the kind of place you'd like to take a summer vacation at—if you could afford it," according to an American photographer who was allowed to take pictures of it a few days ago.

"It's got gardens and woods and a lake shore and the best of everything," said the photographer, Charles T. Haacker.

The conference chamber is about 40 by 30 feet with a peaked roof of oaken beams two stories above the parqueted floor. The deep red color admired by Russian Communists and the German Hohenzollerns alike is dominant in the rugs and draperies.

Haacker counted 15 chairs at the roundtable, three of them large rococo pieces with gilded cherubs on the backrests and standing a foot higher than the others.

D. Gogberidze, a Georgian who catered with distinction at Yalta, has had a special banquet table made for the Big Three and 27 other possible guests.

RUNAWAY HORSE IN PARK INJURES DR. LESLIE AREY

When Miss Dolores Wentland, 22, of 7425 Dixon st., Forest Park, lost control of her rented horse on the Lincoln Park bridle path yesterday and observed Dr. Leslie B. Arey, 54, of 536 Roscoe st., a member of the Northwestern university medical school faculty, in the path, she did two things.

She shouted "whoa" to the horse and "look out" to Dr. Arey.

Neither was effective. The galloping horse struck Dr. Arey, who was taken by park police to American hospital with a cut on the right temple, a bruised left eye, bruises on the left side of his face, and a back injury.

Miss Wentland, described by the operators of the Christensen stable, 1508 N. Clark st., owners of the horse, as an experienced rider, was not held.

CHURCHILL AND TRUMAN REACH BERLIN BY AIR

Stalin Is Believed to Be There

PICTURES OF ARRIVAL

Radiophotos of the arrival of President Truman in Antwerp and of Prime Minister Churchill in Berlin appear on the back page. Picture of palace where Big Three will meet is on page 2.

BERLIN, July 15 (AP)—President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill arrived in Germany's ruined capital by plane today to join Premier Stalin in a conference that may shorten the Pacific war and decide the world's fate for years.

Premier Stalin also was understood to have arrived altho the Russians made no announcement.

It was believed possible that Stalin came from Moscow by special train. Rail traffic between Moscow and Berlin was resumed this month.

Moscow announced yesterday that the premier had departed for the conference, accompanied by Foreign Commissar Molotov.

It was probable that Stalin, like Truman and Churchill, would draw heavily on the advice of his marshals during the deliberations.

The Big Three will begin discussions tomorrow in Kaiser Wilhelm's former castle in suburban Potsdam. An unofficial estimate tonight was that the conference would last from 10 days to three weeks.

Planes roared in over the bomb-blasted capital in an almost continuous stream from about 2:30 p. m. onward, bringing British and American dignitaries, while other American, British, and Russian fighter planes patroled the skies.

Flies from Brussels

The President, accompanied by his personal chief of staff, Adm. Leahy, flew in from Brussels at 4:15 p. m., Berlin time [7:15 a. m., Chicago time], 15 minutes after Secretary of State Byrnes had landed. They had spent 2 hours and 50 minutes in Belgium after leaving the Cruiser Augusta at 11:10 a. m. [4:10 a. m., Chicago time].

The President's plane crossed the Rhine at Coblenz and turned sharply northeastward to pass over Kassel.

The 41st regiment of the 2d armored division formed an honor guard and the division's 56 piece band played as the President, bronzed from his eight days on the Atlantic ocean, stepped spryly from his silver Skymaster transport.

The President looked trim in a gray hat and a gray double breasted suit. The Presidential physician, naval Capt. Alphonse McMahon, said "the trip has done the President a world of good. It's the first time he has relaxed since he took office."

Russians Greet Truman

Truman was greeted by General of the Army Alexander Sokolovsky, chief of staff to Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov, and Col. Gen. Alexander Grobatov, commander of soviet troops in Berlin, as well as Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, commander of American forces in Berlin.

Also in Truman's plane were Gen. Arnold and his son, Lt. Col. Henry H. Arnold Jr., who commanded an artillery unit in the heavy fighting in Anzio, Italy, last year.

Churchill's plane landed at 6:10 p. m. from Bordeaux, France, where he had motored from his vacation retreat in Hendaye.

Mr. Truman has completed his draft of the American proposals he will make. Associates declared the President is ready to offer American coöperation toward Europe's rehabilitation so long as he receives assurance in return that European countries will work together and adjust differences that might result in war.

Pacific War to Fore

The Pacific war is bound to figure prominently in the discussions, but Russia's attitude may not become known for some time after the end of the Potsdam conference.

[A Tokyo commentary broadcast Sunday said "the conference will be centered on Japan," but sought to discount it in advance.]

Adm. King, United States naval commander in chief, had toured Berlin before the President's arrival.

From the Berlin airport, surrounded by tall aspens and cabbage patches, a heavily guarded route led to the Potsdam area. American signs pointed with arrows. British signs used army terminology "L of C" for line of communications.

Thirty-six allied fighter planes patroled the Berlin sky thruout the afternoon, and outgoing traffic was suspended at the airport. The fighter planes were soviet P-39s, American P-51s, and British Spitfires.

More than a dozen silver hulled C-54 transports arrived in the course of the afternoon. The field was guarded by elite troops of the American, Russian, and British armies.

Ready for Long Meeting

The President was prepared for a meeting running longer than the eight-day Yalta conference, last Big Three meeting for President Roosevelt—possibly twice as long.

Men close to the President asserted he is going to the meeting with the hope of aiding European war allies in settling European boundary and territorial disputes which could breed future wars. At the same time, he still considers the No. 1 objective of United States foreign policy to be the early defeat of Japan to save the lives of American boys still fighting the enemy in the Pacific.

There are increasing indications that if the Potsdam parley is unduly prolonged, the President may return immediately to Washington, D. C. which he left July 6. He has decided definitely against going to France, and associates say his reported plans to visit London are tentative.

President Truman left British waters behind last night as the British cruiser Birmingham and six destroyers bade the Augusta godspeed after taking over her escort for several hours.

Truman was as heavily supplied as Churchill with military advisors. Among those whom the Skymasters brought in were Gen. Marshall, army chief of staff; Gen. Somervell, commander of the army service forces, and Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy.

High Officials Gather

Virtually all the highest military and diplomatic leaders of the United States, Russia and Britain gathered for the meeting.

Among Churchill's advisers was Clement Attlee, former deputy prime minister in the British coalition government which served thru most of the European war. In the midst of the recent British election campaign Churchill asked Attlee, leader of the rival labor party, to accompany him to Potsdam "as a friend and counsellor." Attlee accepted, he said, in the interest of presenting a united British foreign policy.

White House correspondents who crossed the Atlantic with the President parted company with him at Brussels but were flown to Berlin and will join him again when the conference ends.

CAPT. GILBERT STUDYING POST IN REICH, REPORT

Capt. Daniel A. Gilbert, chief investigator for the state's attorney's office, was reported yesterday to be considering an invitation to join the army and aid in rehabilitation work in Germany. The request was said to have come from Joseph D. Keenan, former secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who was commissioned a brigadier general in May and sent to Germany as a man power administrator.

Gilbert passed the army's physical tests for a commission in January, 1943. He said then he had not intended it to become known that he was interested in an army career, and that whatever was planned did not materialize.

Gilbert was appointed chief investigator by Thomas J. Courtney when Courtney was elected state's attorney in 1932. Gilbert has held the post ever since, except for a short period when he returned to the police department as chief of uniformed police.

ALLIED CHIEFS REACH BERLIN IN STEADY STREAM

Truman's Plane Is 7th; Churchill's 13th

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, July 15—Allied planes bearing leaders and high officials to the Big Three conference arrived in a steady stream today.

Lt. Col. Henry Myers

President Truman was in the seventh plane to land, and after a quick inspection of his guard of honor provided by veterans of the 41st armored infantry regiment he was whisked off along a closely guarded road to the even more heavily patroled area in which he will live for the duration of the conference.

Mr. Truman arrived at 4:15 p. m. Russian time, which is now Berlin's time, and was followed two hours later by Prime Minister Churchill.

Berliners Scan Skies

Despite efforts to keep details of the meeting dark, every one in Berlin—Germans and foreigners alike—were scanning the skies from early morning for the arrival of the American Skymasters and British Yorks which brought the allied leaders to Hitler's one time capital.

The President had landed early this morning at Antwerp, Belgium, driven to Brussels, then flown from there to Berlin, taking a short detour over northern France to see the devastated areas.

Members of his party said the President spent most of his time in the plane in the co-pilot's seat commenting on transportation and what farming he could see from the air. The plane, known as the Flying White House and the Sacred Cow, is the same one in which President Roosevelt flew to three conferences. The crew, headed by Lt. Col. Henry Myers, is also the same. A fighter escort of 12 P-47s [Thunderbolts] flew with the President all the way from the Belgian border.

Boards Car at Plane

The President boarded a bullet-proof car right at the plane and the convoy of autos started to move when the President decided to inspect his honor guard. It included veterans of the battles of Africa, Sicily, Italy, Normandy, Belgium, and France. He commented on the great number of medals worn by the veterans and asked them about their experiences and how many points they had. The band of the 2d armored [Hell on Wheels] division played the "Star Spangled Banner" and "Hail to the Chief" and gave a ruffe of drums.

While Gen. Eisenhower and Adm. King arrived yesterday, the first one to arrive by air, at 7 o'clock this morning, was Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy. Then, at 2:30 this afternoon in a blazing sun, American and British planes began landing at regular intervals while both American and British guards of honor stood ready. The first plane that landed this afternoon, at 2:30, brought the British military chiefs, Field Marshal Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial staff; R. A. F. Mashal Charles Portal, and Andrew Cunningham, admiral of the fleet.

Russian Greets Eden

Dapper Anthony Eden, Britain's foreign secretary, was next to alight. He was bareheaded and carried his hat in his hand while he was greeted by A. V. Vyshinsky, first deputy commissar of foreign affairs of the soviet union. He was followed closely by a plane carrying British Minister of Transport Leathers and his party.

After a short delay Clement Attlee, leader of the British Labor party, landed and was accorded military honors somewhat to the embarrassment of the men in charge of the field who knew that the American Secretary of War Stimson was in the next plane and feared it would not be possible to move the British guard of honor out of its position on the field quickly enough to have the American guard in readiness for Stimson. But Stimson's arrival did not call for honors.

Byrnes in 6th Plane

The secretary of war landed in Gibraltar and was flown to Cannes. He spent Saturday in the military recreation center at Carlton, enjoying a swim in the Mediterranean. He was greeted here by Joseph Davies and Averell Harriman, the former and present ambassadors to Moscow. From the sixth plane Secretary of State Byrnes emerged gaily stating that he expected to visit Unter den Linden soon.

The President's plane was next and in the eighth additional secret service men and others of the party arrived with Gen. Arnold, Gen. Marshall, Gen. Somervell, British Field Marshal Wilson, following closely after.

Churchill arrived in the 13th plane accompanied by his daughter, Junior Comdr. Mary Churchill, in uniform. Field Marshal Alexander arrived in the 14th and last plane.

With the military police, guards of honor, and the steady stream of arrivals there were about 500 persons on the air field most of the time.

Belgium Gives President Closeup of War's Ruin

BY HAL FOUST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 15—President Truman set foot upon western Europe today, the first United States President to do so since Woodrow Wilson's 1919 venture into continental politics. Mr. Truman lef the cruiser Augusta at Antwerp, motored the 32 miles to Brussels airport, and took off in a plane for the Big Three conference at Berlin.

Grinning boyishly with a felt brimmed gray hat in hand, the President walked down the gangplank to the dock where waited a smiling group of Belgian politicians headed by Jean van den Bosch of the regent's palace, tipping his silk hat. As Charles Sawyer, American ambassador to Belgium, introduced each in the group, they delivered formal, polished statements of welcome in English or in French. Mr. Truman smiled, shook hands, and replied: "Thanks, glad to know you."

People Wave Welcome

Mr. Truman, Sawyer, and Secretary of State Byrnes climbed into the rear seat of an open car. Gen. Eisenhower and Adm. Stark, commander of American naval forces in Europe, who had gone to Antwerp to talk with their commander and with his chief of staff, Adm. Leahy, entered other cars and they motored from the dock guarded by military police.

At the exit from the dock, three or four hundred Belgian men, women, and children waved from the sidewalks, and Mr. Truman waved his hat back at them.

In Antwerp Mr. Truman saw monuments glorifying the leaders in wars that have plagued every generation here since the 9th century. He saw the wreckage of buildings hit by V-1 and V-2 bombs. He saw pill boxes, barbed wire entanglements, and gun emplacements and blown bridges.

Passes Scenes of War

On a two lane express highway, sentries presented arms while others stood with rifles ready, their backs to the road, militant figures in the wheat or clover flats with rows of trees in the background like the landscapes of the Flemish school of painting.

The President passed ammunition dumps and pools of military vehicles awaiting transport to the Pacific. He passed camouflaged concrete bunkers encircled by earth embankments and wire, and a former Gestapo prison now housing local quislings.

At the airport Mr. Truman was met by 400 crack infantrymen of the 35th division, the President's old outfit when he was an artillery captain in the first World war.

Under a sun as hot as midsummer in Independence, Mo., Mr. Truman inspected the group. He shook hands with young lieutenants who had been commissioned in the field for conduct in the face of the enemy.

"The best kind of commission there is," the President said.

Chicagoans in Guard

In the honor guard were the following Chicagoans: Pvt. Albert J. D. Marco, 825 S. Bishop st.; Pvt. John J. Evanoff, 8242 Forest Preserve av.; 2d Lt. Robert J. Fitzgerald, 9404 S. Laflin st.; Pvt. Joseph P. Grzelak, 1846 W. Dickens av.; Pvt. Leslie W. Johnson, 4711 N. Avers av.; Pvt. Elmer C. Lallin, 2058 W. Cermak rd.; Lt. Robert W. Olson, 8414 Blackstone av.

Gen. Eisenhower reminded the President that his plane was ready to take off.

"I hate to leave these men," Mr. Truman said, "but duty calls." He climbed into his four motored plane, but came back down to meet Belgian Premier Achile van Acker.

"I wish you luck," van Acker said.

"Thanks," the President replied. "That's what I need most."

The plane took off into the blue where Thunderbolt fighters had been furnishing security cover. Byrnes, successor to Mr. Truman should the President die in office, took off in a separate plane.

F. D. R. MEMORIAL TO HIMSELF CUTS LEVY ON ESTATE

Land, Buildings Valued at $42,830

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 15 [Special]—Donations by the late President Roosevelt of Hudson river properties to the United States as memorials to himself have removed those properties from the tax rolls and slashed the potential inheritance taxes on his estate, it was disclosed by an inquiry here today.

The late President's estate has been estimated at 2 million dollars, consisting of $900,000 in cash, stocks, and bonds; $100,000 in real estate, and one million dollars inherited from his mother. His will was admitted to probate here July 5.

Latest of the properties removed from the tax rolls of Hyde Park township is a 33.23 acre tract of wooded land inherited by the late President and turned over to the United States as a national historic monument. It contains a rambling stone mansion.

Appropriation Bill Tied Up

Altho Interior Secretary Ickes has accepted the mansion on behalf of the government, title has not changed hands because an appropriation bill for maintenance of the property is tied up in congress.

In 1939 Mr. Roosevelt gave the government a tract of 16.31 acres on which was built a $350,000 library financed by 28,000 contributors solicited thru the machinery of the Democratic national committee. The memorial is to be maintained with government funds.

The assessed value of the land in the 33.23 acre gift is $3,964 and the mansion and 10 other buildings on the site are assessed at $30,300 and insured for $98,000. Assessed values in Dutchess county are assumed to be 80 per cent of actual value, and the land and buildings have a potential value of $42,830 on this computation.

Potential White Elephant

It is considered likely that the donation of this tract and its mansion was made because it seemed destined to become a white elephant which might have to be sold to meet inheritance taxes, which in turn would have been higher if the property had remained a part of the estate.

Three-fourths of the palatial estates along the Hudson river heights in Hyde Park township have been given to the state or federal governments or to religious institutions, thus removing them from the tax rolls.

Inquiry has disclosed that the families of only three of the original owners of the 13 estates on the east bank remain as occupants. The others have disposed of their inherited properties to save taxes and to avoid the cost of maintenance.

Tax Revenues Fall

Soon after the late President's gift of the 33.23 acres was made in January, 1944, Elmer van Wagner, town supervisor, reported that tax receipts of the township's fire district had fallen 40 per cent because of the removal from tax rolls of various estates amounting to $473,000 in assessed valuation.

Among properties no longer taxed are the former Vanderbilt estate, given by the heirs to the federal government, and the estate of the late Col. Archibald Rogers for which the government paid $150,000 to his heirs.

Heirs of the wealthy men who built the mansions have migrated to Newport, Long Island, and other areas that have acquired higher social ranking in recent years. The new owners have included Father Divine's "heaven" of Negro religious followers not far from the Roosevelt family's Crum Elbow section.

The latest Roosevelt gift will cut the total value of the late President's estate by $42,830 and thus reduce the inheritance taxes levied by state and federal governments. As tax rates are steeply progressive in the higher brackets, a cut in the estate would bring tax savings in larger ratio than otherwise could be expected.

Mr. Roosevelt's realty holdings in Hyde Park township totaled 1,171 acres, comprising 16 parcels. Altho he inherited the most valuable parcels, he also purchased 740 acres over a 30 year period. The assessed value of all holdings was $112,900, or an actual value of $141,125 based on the 80 per cent valuation.

The 67.36 acres retained for the family's use was termed wooded and rocky land unsuitable for farming. The rest of the 1,171 acres is operated by tenant farmers or used for growing Christmas trees.

The mansion was built in 1826 and bought by James Roosevelt, the late President's father, in 1867. The elder Roosevelt left approximately $750,000 when he died in 1901.

PACIFIC AIR GENERAL FORESEES 3,000 PLANE RAIDS 'IF NECESSARY'

GUAM, July 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Lt. Gen. Barney M. Giles, new deputy commander of the United States strategic air forces in the Pacific, said today that it would be possible for the strategic and tactical air forces together to put 3,000 planes over a target "if necessary."

Actually, however, in Japan itself "there is nothing left there as individual target" worth a 1,000-plane strategic raid, Giles said.

Under the program establishing the strategic air forces—USASTAF—Giles said the 21st bomber command and the B-29 groups in China and India are consolidated under the new designation. Heading the consolidated forces will be Gen. Spaatz with Giles as his deputy.

CHINESE TROOPS TAKE KANHSIEN AND CHENGHSIEN

Withdrawing Japs Put Suichwan in Peril

CHUNGKING, July 15 (AP)—Chinese assault troops have recaptured the lost American air field at Kanhsien, 250 miles north of Hong Kong, the Chinese high command said today, giving the United States 14th air force an advance base from which to lash China's "invasion" coast.

Chinese coastal forces at the same time plunged up the eastern seaboard and captured Chenghsien in Chekiang province, 117 miles south of Shanghai and only 59 miles southeast of the teeming industrial metropolis of Hangchow, Chinese headquarters said. The high command announced that Chenghsien had been seized after enemy remnants were mopped up there and also from Tientai and Sinchang, on the Hangchow-Wenchow highway south of Chenghsien.

Withdraw to North

The Japanese rearguards were left by main enemy forces as the bulk of Japan's troops in Chekiang province withdrew northward toward the Hangchow bay area.

The Japanese gained up to 10 miles, reaching points four and a half miles south and six miles east of Suichwan, the bulletin said, placing that regained field in imminent danger of recapture by the Japanese.

From Luichow, Chinese forces following in the wake of withdrawing enemy troops made new progress along the Hunan-Kwangsi railroad and highway toward the triple air field base at Kweilin.

Chinese columns, striking along the highway, were approaching Yungfu, 31 miles southwest of Kweilin, a bulletin said, while other units pushing along the railroad were laying siege to Kwangminhu, 20 miles southwest of Yuntgu.

Two hundred and seventeen miles southeast of Canton, Chinese forces operating along the south China coast June 30 recaptured the important highway center of Limkong in the neck of the Luichow peninsula, the high command announced belatedly.

Chennault Scores Critics

KUNMING, China, July 15 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Chennault, who has resigned as commander of the 14th United States air force, said today he had been shocked deeply by what he termed adverse criticism of the armies and government of China "recently made by irresponsible persons at home."

"I think it's about time for Americans to cease to be so concerned by the mote in our neighbor's eye," he said in a statement.

Chennault, former leader of the Flying Tigers, announced his resignation yesterday. He said he would remain until a new higher United States air force command is installed in Chungking, and then return to the United States and retire from the army.

Chennault said that China's armies and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government were "no more faultless than any others."

"I have been a witness of eight years of war in China, and I have the deepest admiration for the generalissimo's courage, foresight, and unwavering loyalty to the cause we share," Chennault said.

"I think it's time for us to remember that we owe China an immense debt."

Tribute to Commander

Chennault said that Lt. Gen. Wedemeyer, as commanding general of United States forces in China, had done a "great job," and that the Japanese now were being pushed back in retreat. In his tribute to Gen. Wedemeyer, Chennault said the "war was at a low ebb here when he assumed command."

Chennault said that one of the most important factors in driving back the Japanese "has been the forging of a Sino-American team."

His resignation was announced simultaneously by Chennault and Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, new overall commander of United States air forces in China.

Chennault is known as one of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's most intimate advisers. He came here in 1937, and guided the organization of a Chinese air force to fight the Japanese. After the Japanese attacked the United States, he formed the colorful Flying Tigers in July of 1941. Later he was reinstated by the United States army air force.

7 BELGIAN NUNS AND PRIESTS SET FREE ON LUZON

ARMY HDQ., Luzon, July 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Two Belgian priests and five nuns, escorted by spear-wielding natives, have reached American lines in the bamboo forests near Kiangan, northern Luzon, the 6th infantry division reported today. The missionaries fled to the mountains six months ago when the retreating Japanese army occupied Kiangan.

Some of the party had served for 37 years in the Philippines and one had served in the United States. They were the Rev. Jerome Moerman and the Rev. Alphonse Coymans, both of the Brussels congregation of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, and Mothers Eugene, Oda Renata, Vincent, Rachel, and Guillaume. All are missionary canonists of St. Augustine.

Tired and covered with dust, the group was given coffee and doughnuts when they arrived at the 6th division camp. Asked what they hoped to do now that they are free, the seven replied almost in unison: "Clean up and go back to Kiangan."

REDS APPROVE UNION OF FOUR REICH PARTIES

BERLIN, July 15 (AP)—A soviet-approved pattern for Germany's political rebirth was blazoned in Berlin newspapers today with the formation of a united front of four parties on the eve of the Potsdam meeting.

Contrasting sharply with the British-American policy of stifling all political activity in western Germany, Russian authorities gave the widest possible publicity to the coalition of the Communist-Socialist, Democratic Christian, Democratic Union, and Liberal Democratic parties achieved here.

The program adopted by combined committees of the four parties follows:

1.—Coöperation in cleaning Germany of Hitlerism and imperialistic-militaristic thought.

2.—Energetic efforts for a quick rebuilding of economy to create work, bread, clothing, and housing.

3.—Restitution of justice and the basis of a democratic state.

4.—Insuring of freedom of spirit and thought, including religious convictions.

FLEET SHELLS HOKKAIDO PORT FOR SECOND DAY

128 Jap Ships Blasted by Carrier Planes

stroyed aground and one was damaged. There was no aerial interception, and anti-aircraft fire did no damage.

Further reports from Saturday's carrier actions showed 24 Japanese ships and 25 barges totaling 41,000 tons were sunk and 25 ships totaling 43,000 tons were damaged. Among the ships sunk or beached were six of the train ferries which bring Hokkaido's war necessary coal to Honshu.

An open hearth blast furnace and chemical plant and warehouses were "heavily hit" and a coal liquefaction plant—including gas and storage tanks—was aflame. Many other fires were observed along the city's waterfront.

Ships Fly Battle Flags

Muroran, Japan's second ranking steel city, lies at the northern lip of Uchiura bay, southeastern Hokkaido Island surrounded by hills. The battleships law offshore 30,000 yards to lob shells into the basket target.

The city is 250 miles north of Kamaishi, on northern Honshu, where another battleship squadron of Adm. Halsey's fleet Friday demolished the Imperial iron and steel works and set the city's harbor area afire.

Besides the steel mills, the battleships had other choice targets in factories producing aviation fuel and tank, munitions, and machinery plants.

Planes Hit Hakodate

The bombarding force could reach its objective only by steaming into the gulf that leads into Uchiura bay. The mouth of the bay is 17 miles across and the approach to it is only 60 miles wide.

A "strong force" of Privateer search planes sank or damaged 12 Japanese vessels, inflicted "extensive damage" on an oil refinery, and wrecked railroad installations in Saturday sweeps over a wide area of Korea, Adm. Nimitz announced.

Striking as far north as Heiko and Gensan, the search craft destroyed a railroad bridge, damaged another, skip bombed and sealed a tunnel, exploded three locomotives, and strafed coast, the communique added.

More than 100 Iwo based fighters destroyed or damaged 37 Japanese airplanes yesterday in strikes at six Nagoya area air fields. They also attacked shipping in Nagoya bay and railroad yards in low level strafing attacks. Three Mustangs were lost.

Rake Kyushu Air Fields

MANILA, July 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Patrol bombers from Okinawa have raked two air fields on the Japanese island of Kyushu, Gen. MacArthur's bulletin announced today.

The operations were limited by bad weather, as were harassing sweeps of the day before. The air bases struck were at Miyazaki and Kagoshima.

BRITISH TROOPS BESIEGE JAPS' MYITKYO BASE

CALCUTTA, July 15 (AP)—British 14th army troops have seized the initiative from Japanese forces in the Sittang river bend in south Burma, and are besieging the main Japanese concentration point of Myitkyo, 74 miles northeast of Rangoon, Adm. Mountbatten's headquarters said today.

British raiding parties attacked Myitkyo, 29 miles northeast of Pegu, with machine guns and grenades while Thunderbolt and Spitfire fighter bombers blasted enemy troops in the area, a bulletin said.

Ninety miles to the north, Japanese artillery, covering the withdrawal of enemy troops toward Indo-China, shelled a British position on the Toungoo-Indo-China road.

JAPS THREATEN A SURPRISE FOR NIMITZ'S FLEET

San Francisco, Cal., July 15 (AP)—The Japanese army admitted today the United States had bombarded the home islands for the second day in a row and told of widespread air raids. A navy spokesman talked of "a surprise for Adm. Nimitz in the not too distant future."

A bulletin announced the aerial targets as Kakohate, prefectural capital; Asahigawa and Obihiro, inland railway hubs; the ports of Otaru and Kushiro on the west and east coasts, and the port of Abashiri, far to the north.

The bulletin claimed that 12 raiders were brought down today.

The naval spokesman, Capt. Goro Takase, asserted that Adm. Nimitz "admitted" the naval raid was "one-sided in the sense that the Japanese had completely ignored the challenge."

The Tokyo radio hinted that the surprise which Takase promised might be a secret weapon, mention "certain developments being experimented upon here."

62 Yanks Killed, 195 Wounded in Philippines

MANILA, July 16 [Monday]—(AP)—An additional 4,879 enemy dead have been counted and 608 captured in mopping up operations in the Philippines, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said today. American casualties last week were 62 killed, 195 wounded, and one missing. This brought total Japanese casualties in the Philippines campaign to 428,732, including 10,768 prisoners.

4 U. S. Radio Operators Die on Brazil Cruiser Raft

RECIFE, Brazil, July 15 (AP)—Four United States radio operators aboard the Brazilian cruiser Bahia when the warship exploded and sank July 4 died on a life raft, according to Lt. Comdr. Luiz Clovis Oliveira, second in command of the Brazilian destroyer Greenhalgh, which docked today with four survivors.

GASOLINE LACK GROUNDS JAPS, KENNEY OPINES

[Copyright: 1945: By the New York Times]

MANILA, P. I., July 15—The Japanese air force is failing to rise in defense of its homeland against repeated American attacks because of lack of fuel, lack of pilots, and lack of spare parts, with a gasoline shortage the most probable explanation, according to Gen. Kenney, commander of the far east air forces.

The failure of the enemy airmen to send fighters into the air is one of the major recent surprises of the war in the Pacific; and, according to Gen. Kenney, is another example of "stupid leadership."

Reports show that since July 1 B-29 pilots over Japan have sighted less than one hundred Japanese planes, a majority of which sheered off while others were shot down. Over Kyushu, where Gen. Kenney's Mustangs and attack bombers have been ranging widely since July 3, the same situation has prevailed, with no interception since July 7.

Severed from Oil Supply

Airmen are asking: "What has become of the Jap air force?" According to Gen. Kenney the answer may lie in the long blockade campaign, which severed the empire from its major source of fuel supply in the Netherlands Indies and may have prevented the Japanese from building stockpiles of aviation gasoline.

"It seems to be a question of whether Japan had had an opportunity to build large fuel supplies from the Netherlands Indies," Gen. Kenney said. "It may have taken them as much as a year to rebuild the Indies refineries and begin operations in the demolished oil fields. All that time their shipping was being smashed, and in 1942-43 they were operating lots of aircraft. Whether they were able to do that and still build reserves I do not know."

Gen. Kenney believes the Japanese are making one of their major mistakes if it should prove they are able to use their planes, but are withholding them awaiting the appearance of American troop convoys off the coast of Japan.

Should Take Offensive

"If the Japanese will not take off, we will burn their planes on the ground," Kenney said. "We are flying over Japan practically unopposed in the air. It is no way to fight to hold back your interceptors when enemy bombers are within range. Those bombers just come in and wipe you out."

What the Japanese should be doing, according to Kenney, is to throw whatever remains of their air force into the attack.

"The less you have got the more you should be on the offensive," Gen. Kenney said.

"The suicide theory has in it seeds of its own destruction," he continued. "If you send experienced pilots out in suicide planes, when they hit their targets they are gone, your trained personnel is gone. If you send half-trained men or student pilots out you throw away the seed of your future air force."

May Lack Spare Parts

A third possible reason why the Japanese are unable to intercept American bomber attacks may be a lack of spare parts and a trained industrial personnel which, presumably, is dwindling as the Americans hit Japan's major factory areas.

"When the Germans were scraping the bottom of the barrel, the allies found much the same conditions in Europe we are meeting over Japan today," said Kenney. "Later it was found that the Germans were out of fuel, spare parts, and trained personnel."

Hoosiers Hold Reunion in Manila

BY DONALD STARR
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., July 15—The earthy friendliness characteristic of all reunions in Hooslerdom pervaded the Red Cross club room today when more than 50 service men from Wabash county, Ind., gathered to spin yarns, play games, and, inevitably, eat.

There was no fried chicken, no corn on the cob; but the Red Cross provided cheese sandwiches and doughnuts, and the spirit the boys brought to the affair more than made up for the lack of customary amenities.

Most of the men came from the 38th division, the former Indiana national guard outfit, which has been fighting in the mountains northeast of Manila for several weeks. They are veterans of the reconquest of Bataan and hard fighting in Zigzag pass.

Mayor Promotes Union

Mayor Homer T. Showalter of Wabash, Ind., and the Wabash Kiwanis club are responsible for the reunion. The mayor each week publishes the Wabash Bulletin, which is distributed to Wabash service men thruout the world by the Kiwanis club. He suggested the reunion on the banks of the Pasig. He wrote to Capt. Donald Glassco of the 38th division, who had charge of the details locally.

No formal program was arranged, and the boys, after vociferous greetings, settled down to a conversational six hours, which is par for most of their family reunions at home.

While the reunion was planned for Wabash county boys only, service men from other parts of Indiana came in and joined the party. Glassco was particularly happy with the tournout. He had difficulty publicizing the affair, but managed to et word around thru mimeographed circulars and a notice in the Free Philippines, a newspaper distributed free by office of war information.

Here Are the Hoosiers

Among those attending the party were:

Pvt. Cecil Jacob, Junior Yeoman Clyde Switzer, Sgt. William Benson, Sgt. L. J. Leach, Pvt. Wilbur Cox, Sgt. Don Whinery, Pvt. Harry France, Pvt. Eltzrath, Pvt. Islands Occupied

GUAM, July 16 [Monday]—(AP)—The islands of Ihiya and Aguni in the Okinawa group were occupied by American forces on June 3 and June 9 without opposition, Adm. Nimitz announced today. Rear Adm. R. L. Reifsnider was in command of the amphibious operations.

The 8th marine regimental combat team made both landings under command of Maj. Gen. L. P. Hunt. Ihiya is a small island 25 miles northwest of the northern tip of Okinawa. Aguni is 35 miles west of central Okinawa.

No reason was given for the delay of more than a month in announcing the occupation.

G. I. Joe in the Pacific

By ARTHUR VEYSEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH 7TH FLEET SUBMARINES, July 15—"It's all luck," said Comdr. Royce Gross, a submariner from years back and a modest speaking man if there ever was one.

"Now take that day we ran into the biggest Jap convoy I've ever seen," he said. "Twelve ships if I remember correctly. We started after them, but before we could catch up they passed another convoy coming our way. This had only four ships, but since it was approaching us we changed our plans and maneuvered for it.

"When we were in range we let go with everything we had. And didn't hit a single ship. Not a one. It's all luck.

"Another day we spotted five ships traveling in two columns led by a couple of destroyers. It was daytime and we tried to learn their course before we submerged. We'd run away, and the ships would zig and we'd reverse. When they were about 10 miles off we dived. We went first one way and then the other. In the end we were almost exactly where we started.

Right in the Middle

"We ran up our periscope and found we were right in the middle of the convoy—just were every submariner dreams of being. We turned crosswise and fired both bow and stern torpedoes at the same time. That finished the two lead ships.

"We went down and started off in one direction and when the destroyers came charging back they went the other way, so we got away easy as you please. It's all luck."

Maybe it's to luck also that you can attribute what happened one day at the entrance to a Japanese harbor. Lt. Harry Felsenthal, Fillmore, Cal., tells it this way:

"We pulled into the harbor just as a Jap convoy was forming. The place was full of ships. We went right in and sprayed it. We hit seven ships.

Torpedo a Carrier

"We headed for the open spaces and ran for about an hour. Then we picked up a ship dead ahead. We pushed up our 'scope to take a look, and there was a Jap aircraft carrier. Big as day and all alone. Her deck was half full of Jap planes. The other planes, along with her surface escort, were all in the harbor hunting us.

"We wasted no time. We put three fish in her and crash dived. We heard her engines stop. In a couple of minutes there came the noises a ship makes when breaking up. They sound like a bunch of firecrackers mixed with groans that are almost human.

"In half an hour we came up again. There was no carrier in sight, but because there was not much debris and we didn't see the hen sink we could only claim we had damaged her. But if you ask any of the men on our sub. . . ."

INDIA LEADERS ASSAIL CHARTER AS IMPERIALISTIC

SIMLA, India, July 15 (AP)—The All-India Congress party today criticized the united nations charter and asserted that the great powers had shown no inclination at San Francisco to give up colonial possessions and special privileges enjoyed at the expense of dependent peoples.

The Congress party's working committee, in a statement, said the allied nations' declaration regarding nonselfgoverning territories was vague and unsatisfactory and little better than the old mandate system of the league of nations."

The statement asserted that the discussion at San Francisco regarding trusteeships, and objections to the use of the word "independence," was evidence that the "imperialist powers still are functioning in their old imperialist way and intend to retain and exploit their possessions."

Blame Factions

The failure of the Simla conference and the discarding of Viceroy Wavell's plan for a new Indian government were blamed today on both British and Indian party leaders by parley participants and observers.

The Congress party pinned responsibility upon the Moslem league, saying its attitude on the issue of Moslem representation in the proposed interim government was the immediate cause of failure, but added that the British were basically responsible in permitting the league's veto on a single point to block the Wavell plan despite the agreement of all other factions.

Attacks Wavell

Chakravarti Rajagopalachark who participated in the conference as a former premier of Madras, declared that Wavell, having rejected the league's demand that it be the sole nominator for the interim government's executive council, should have taken the "necessary consequential action" by forming a government without the league's participation.

Tara Singh, who represented Sikhs in the conference, apparently voicing the view of the minorities involved, blamed the conference collapse on the rigid refusal to make concessions by leaders of both the league and congress.

AUSSIES NEAR OIL FIELDS OF EASTERN BORNEO

MANILA, July 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Capture of one of the principal oil fields in eastern Borneo was imminent today after Australian troops pushed to within five miles of the center of Sambodja against vanishing Japanese resistance.

Advances of five miles in two days were disclosed in Gen. MacArthur's war summary, and they came in a sector along the coast where previous gains had been bought by the yard in heavy fighting.

Australians and Dutch colonials brought heavy artillery to bear and drove the Japanese from Mount Batochampar or "Smashed Stone Ridge," six miles northeast of Balikpapan.

This was an important obstacle in the northeastward push along the highway leading to the port and oil center of Samarinda, 60 miles distant.

Found holding a hammer at Le Moyne st. and Pulaski rd., where the windows of two automobiles were smashed, William Bourne, 25, of 935 N. Sacramento av., was arrested yesterday by police who said he was intoxicated.

LABOR STORY!

NOTE—From time to time, in this paper, there will appear an article which we hope will be of interest to our fellow Americans. This is number ninety-nine of a series.

SCHENLEY DISTILLERS CORP., NEW YORK

SUGAR!

On our desk we find clippings from newspapers telling of protests here and there, decrying the use of sugar by distilleries for the making of whiskey, "when housewives have received a cut in sugar for essential canning and preserving." And over the radio, too, remarks such as the following have been heard: "Last year 100,250,000 pounds of sugar were made up (by distilleries) to be drunk four years from now."

Now that isn't "cricket," is it—when the real facts are known? And here are the facts. The War Food Administration, the Office of Price Administration and the War Production Board, in a joint statement said: "No sugar has been allotted for the manufacture of beverage alcohol in connection with the July holiday. No sugar had been allocated for this use during the two past "releases" of distillery facilities, for the production of beverage alcohol."

So please remember this; we do not use sugar in the manufacture of distilled spirits . . . we use grain. And it is estimated that, in July, all of the beverage alcohol distillers in the United States will use less than ¾ of 1% of the total supply of available grain.

You will please remember, too, that only part of the grain is used by us in making beverage spirits. The rest of the valuable content is recovered and converted into poultry and cattle feed and returns to the farm to assist in the production of poultry, eggs, milk and meat.

STATE TO BUILD 170 AIRPORTS IN NEXT DECADE

100 Million Expenditure Predicted by Regan

BY ROY GIBBONS

Illinois communities during the next 10 years will spend a minimum of 100 million dollars for the construction of 170 new airports, it was predicted yesterday by Ben Regan, chairman of the Illinois aeronautics commission. He is holding over by executive order until Gov. Green appointr a director for the newly created state department of aeronautics.

This estimate, Regan said, does not include an additional expenditure for constructing an international airport equipped for seaplane landings on Chicago's lake front. The latter facility, he asserted, must be built if Chicago is to realize its ambition to become the center of world aviation.

250 State Airports Forecast

At present, Illinois has 80 standard airports, of which 20 are in operation in the Chicago area. It also has 23 airports in various stages of improvement or construction and an additional port at St. Charles that Norman C. Bird, Illinois state airport engineer, reports is being readied by the federal government to be turned back to civilian use. The 170 new sites forecast by Regan will give the state 250 airports by 1955.

Existing airports in the state range in size from class 1 to class 4. Classification is governed by the length of the runways. A class 1 airport is from 1,800 to 2,500 feet long, class 2 from 2,500 to 3,000 feet, class 3 from 3,500 to 4,500 feet, class 4 from 4,500 to 5,500. Class 5 airports are 5,500 feet or longer.

Class 5 Fields to Be Built

There are no class 5 fields in Illinois. But the next decade, Regan said, will see several of them built, as well as additional fields in classes 3 and 4. The larger ports, he said, will be constructed near principal centers of population in Illinois. However, the bulk of new construction as contemplated by the Illinois post-war planning commission on aviation, he asserted, will be concentrated on classes 1 and 2 airports to accommodate the private [nonscheduled] plane owner. The small plane owner, Regan said, in the opinion of aviation authorities, will provide 97 per cent of post-war air traffic.

Change in Trend Urged

Most privately owned planes now are flown for pleasure. Col. George C. Roberts, acting head of the state department of aeronautics and former secretary of the Illinois aeronautics commission, pointed out.

The education job that lies ahead, he said, calls for reversing the present 80 per cent pleasure trend, so that private planes in the future will be flying only 20 per cent for fun and 80 per cent for business.

Development of aviation on a gigantic scale in Illinois, Regan and Roberts emphasized, is now assured thru various bills enacted at the recent session of the state legislature.

State Help for Aviation

Highlights of these assisting measures call for:

1. A $3,000,000 fund for post-war aviation development in the state.
2. A $9,700,000 appropriation for blueprinting post-war public improvements conceivably including aviation.
3. A $250,000 appropriation for administration of the new state department of aeronautics thru the next two years.
4. The right of counties having fewer than 500,000 population to float bond issues for the construction and operation of county owned airports.
5. A municipal airport authority act empowering cities with between 5,000 and 500,000 population to act singly or together in contiguous territory in constructing and operating airports.

These enabling acts, Roberts pointed out, are in addition to statutes already in existence granting villages, park districts, and counties with more than 500,000 population the right to build airports.

BRITISH SQUEEZE ON EGYPT FAILS TO STIR ENVOYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., July 15—Diplomatic sources in Washington today expressed no surprise over the disclosure that civilian censorship blocked the distribution outside of Egypt of court testimony that Great Britain "pressured" Egypt into a declaration of war against the axis.

The general attitude was that it was common knowledge Great Britain had applied pressure not only against Egypt, but several other small nations to get them to line up with the allies.

The censorship was disclosed yesterday in an Associated Press dispatch from London which said one of its correspondents had reported from Cairo that 82 words had been deleted from a news story he had cabled. The substance of the censored cable was that a young Egyptian lawyer, who has pleaded guilty to assassinating the Egyptian premier after the latter announced his country's declaration of war against the axis in February, testified in his court defense that England had used pressure on Egypt.

Censor Outbound Cables

The correspondent advised the Associated Press London bureau that local Egyptian papers were permitted to print the testimony, but that all outgoing cables were subjected to British controled civilian censorship. The court, after hearing the defendant's testimony, said that Egypt's war declaration was in accordance with the Yalta conference agreement.

The Associated Press reported in its dispatch that a spokesman for the British ministry of information in London commented that there was nothing that could be done about the censorship and added: "After all, the war's over, and if we persuaded Egypt to get into it, what's the difference."

Other Squeezes Recalled

The state department had no comment on the disclosure. No one was available at the British embassy or Egyptian legation who could make a statement.

Other Washington diplomatic sources said, however, that the British had pursued a definite policy of "putting the squeeze" on smaller nations either to get them into the war against the axis, or adopt policies favorable to the allies.

At the Yalta conference, it was decided that only nations at war with the axis would be invited to the San Francisco world security conference. This decision was followed by a rush of nations to declare war and join the allies. Egypt, Turkey, Iraq, Syria, and Lebanon were among those which hastened to declare war.

SALAD VICTIMS ARE RECOVERING, ARMY REPORTS

Galesburg, Ill., July 15 (AP)—Col. Henry L. Krafft, commanding officer at Mayo General hospital, said today that all except a few patients and civilian hospital workers who became ill of food poisoning yesterday had recovered.

A total of 1,200 persons had been reported ill. Col. Krafft said those still suffering were expected to recover in 24 hours.

The infection, traced to a ham salad, evidenced itself one or two hours after the noon meal, Col. Krafft said.

FRANCE SEEKS COMMERCIAL PLANES IN U. S.

Can't Produce Transports Until End of 1947

BY FRANK STURDY
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, July 15—French industry will not be producing sufficient airplanes for the country's air lines until the end of 1947 and meanwhile must depend on the United States for modern transport aircraft.

Describing the situation of the French aviation industry in an interview today, Marcel Clicques, chief of the civil branch of the air ministry, said that by stripping factories of machine tools and transporting engineers to Germany the Nazis had seriously retarded French aeronautical technique.

A commission now is in the United States, he said, negotiating for the right to manufacture American engines and to buy planes for French air lines until the domestic industry regains its strength.

Plane Hidden from Nazis

The French have only one airplane, the six engined Latecoere, suitable for trans-Atlantic service. The plane is famous as the only important French aircraft kept out of the hands of the Germans. During the occupation it was concealed, dismantled, in a forest.

Weighing 144,000 pounds and capable of carrying 40 passengers for 4,500 miles at a speed of about 185 miles an hour, according to Clicques, it is now being flight tested. The plane had just been completed when the Germans overran France.

While waiting for more Latecoeres and other transocean types of their own design, Clicques said the French went to buy the American Douglas DC-3 type for service on the continent and DC-4s for trans-Atlantic service.

Delay Laid to Politics

There was seven months' delay before the United States granted permission for the French commission to enter, Clicques said, attributing the slowness to "politics."

France has not signed the fifth freedom clause in the international formula produced by the Chicago aviation conference last year. Strongly advocated by the United States, this clause gives the signatory countries the right to pick up traffic in one country for destination in another.

Under the old bilateral agreements United States lines are not permitted to pick up passengers in England or France for points in a third country. The British, also refusing to agree on the fifth freedom, are insisting on a form that will divide flight schedules and numbers of passengers on some fixed ratio, thus eliminating the competitive element.

Allocate Transports

The American state department is understood to be following a policy of allocating available American transports to countries willing to accept the fifth freedom.

Clicques said that France so far has received a few converted army C-47s, the military version of the DC-3, but not for commercial use. They are being flown, he said, only for military purposes, inside France, between France, and England, and between France and the French African colonies.

French aircraft factories now are making German planes of the transport type with the same tools they used while forced to produce for the Germans, Clicques said, but complete the same number of planes in a month with only half the labor. As with other French industry, he said, the chief lack is coal.

The only other French purchasing commission for the air industry is now in England to secure engines but not planes.

Research on jet propulsion as early as 1939 was interrupted by the Germans, Clicques disclosed. The French will seek the assistance of American technicians in this and other fields.

1,100 FOUNDRY WORKERS PLAN STRIKE JULY 23

Between 1,100 and 1,200 foundry workers in Chicago, Aurora, Joliet, and Batavia will strike July 23, William Lorenz, district representative of the International Moulders and Foundry Workers' union [AFL], announced yesterday. The decision was made at a general union meeting at 110 S. Francisco av. yesterday afternoon.

Involved in the dispute with 39 foundries making critical war materials are five locals of the union, which have asked for a 4 cent an hour increase or paid holidays, sick leaves, and rest periods. A meeting of the Chicago Foundrymen's association, the employers' group, with union officials and William G. Murray of the United States conciliation service failed to adjust the issues Saturday.

Lorenz charged that the foundry workers have not received a wage increase since 1942.

OPEN HEARING TODAY IN WAGE DISPUTE ON TWO ELECTRIC LINES

A three man emergency panel of the national mediation board will open hearings this morning on a wage dispute between two operating unions and the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee and the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin electric railroads.

The hearings will be held in the federal courthouse in Chicago by Justice Roger I. McDonough of the Utah Supreme court, Justice John W. Yeager of the Nebraska Supreme court, and Robert W. Woolley, former member of the interstate commerce commission.

Unions involved are the International Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers. A similar panel last fall granted a five cent an hour increase to the crews.

If Your Advertising Meets Its Biggest Challenge

Know this man?

He is Wage Earner America. He and the millions of families like his form nearly 50 per cent of the total population—nearly 70 per cent of the city population.

He can buy America's prosperity.

Here's how:

When we're ready for final peace, we can provide jobs for all willing to work if we will manufacture and sell 50 per cent more than we did in the best pre-war year.

We can do that if we can find the customer who can consume that much... afford that much.

There is a customer like that in America—these same Wage Earner millions.

They are America's great new market of tomorrow—right now... today. Their saved up billions at this moment are four times greater than all America had saved up back in 1918. And the spendable cash of Wage Earner income, above basic and fixed expenditures, has advanced 92 per cent—while that of America's white collar group has decreased 31 per cent.

W.P.B. Chairman Krug points out that 8 out of 9 of these Wage Earners will go right on in the change-over period doing exactly what they have been doing—in the same plant, at the same job they always had—ready—and able to buy the goods that will keep all hands employed.

But it's up to your advertising to hold these Wage Earner millions up to the great new standards of living that have been theirs during the war. It's up to your advertising to reassure them of the Security of Spending.

They'll buy if your advertising wins their trust ... their belief.

There's one sure place where you know you can win both their trust and belief. For they've given both—for 25 years—to Macfadden publications, where they found the magazines which best interpret their lives, their hopes, their aspirations.

No other magazines reach more of America's Wage Earner millions. No other magazines have greater power to influence them.

Headquarters for Wage Earner Information

In the last 12 years, Wage Earner America has become the dominant influence on our economic and social life. Through these years Macfadden Publications have accumulated an immense amount of data on every facet of Wage Earner life in order (as stated in Macfadden's pledge to industry)... "to maintain our service to Industry as the most authoritative private source of knowledge and understanding of these people—upon whom Industry—and, indeed, our entire economic system as we presently know it—must depend."

Here are a few of the titles released recently by Macfadden's Research Director Everett R. Smith. These will be of immediate interest to executives seeking clearer understanding of how America's Wage Earner millions live, work, plan:

MINE LADEN SUB ON WAY TO U. S. RAMMED, SUNK

U-Boat Intended to Plant Explosives in Harbors

Washington, D. C., July 15 (AP)—The navy today revealed how a German U-boat, loaded with mines destined for planting in Atlantic seaboard waters, was rammed and sunk by the destroyer escort Thomas a year ago.

The mines apparently were intended for harbor entrances at New York or Halifax, but they found their way to the ocean floor when the Thomas ripped open the hull of the 1,600 ton submarine minelayer, the U-233, July 5, 1944. A surface battle preceded the ramming.

The U-boat was almost cut in two by the crash. The submarine, one of the largest German minelayers, with a capacity of 66 mines, sank in a few seconds.

Ordered to Intercept Craft

The Thomas, operating as part of a task group, was ordered late in June to proceed toward Cape Race, Newfoundland, to intercept an eastbound submarine.

"We always had an ambition to ram an enemy submarine, and we got our wish that day," the Thomas' skipper, Lt. Comdr. David M. Kellogg, Seattle, Wash., said in a navy statement.

"On July 5, the U. S. S. Baker, another destroyer escort, reported to the task group commander that she had a sub contact. The Baker attacked immediately with depth charges while the Thomas closed in at flank speed."

The Baker was under command of Lt. Comdr. N. C. Hoffman, Swampscott, Mass.

Forced to Surface

Survivors of the U-boat said the first depth charge attack caught them by surprise. The concussion tore a torpedo from its service rack, crashing it into an after torpedo tube with enough force to rupture watertight fittings, and the U-boat was forced to surface dead ahead of the Thomas.

"We were about 11,000 yards from the scene of action when the sub's bow broke water dead ahead," Lt. Comdr. Kellogg said. "The Baker opened fire. At 9,000 yards the Thomas opened fire with all forward guns, and continued rapid fire all the time she was closing in for the kill.

"Flames were shooting out of the sub's conning tower, but as we closed to 7,000 yards the smoke cleared and we could see him getting under way, trying to break off and hide in a fog bank about two miles distant. We could see men jumping or falling off the U-boat's sides, but these were flashes from aft the conning tower and splashes off our port bow.

Prepare for Collision

"Word was passed thruout the ship to stand by for a ram. At 250 yards we slowed to standard speed, and at 50 yards we went into emergency full stern with full right rudder to keep us on a collision course designed to hit the sub right at the conning tower."

He said the crash knocked men sprawling all over the Thomas, altho they had been warned and were prepared for it.

The Thomas picked up 29 survivors of the U-boat, including her commanding officer, Hans Steen.

LEOPOLD BALKS AT ABDICATION; MAY BE OUSTED

BY HAL FOUST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 15—King Leopold III. again has refused to abdicate and his dispossession is to be debated by parliament. This announcement, a surprise to diplomatic and political circles here, was issued tonight by Premier Achille van Acker. The premier also said the king would not return to Belgium.

Van Acker returned last night from a conference in St. Wolfgang, near Salzburg, Austria, where the king has been since his liberation after five years as a prisoner.

Special Session Soon

Leopold's brother, Prince Charles, who is regent, returned to Brussels this evening with the presidents of both chambers of parliament. Parliament is expected to be called into special session promptly.

The Communists, most vocal of the left wingers fighting repatriation of the king, have published what they hold is documentary evidence of Leopold's collaboration with Hitler while a prisoner of war.

Britain Interested

Great Britain outwardly has kept hands off this controversy but its interest is obvious—not to let the Reds gain strength in Belgium, on its doorstep to the continent and only a short flying distance from London.

The cabinet which has resolved to resign if Leopold should enter Belgium, will continue to function under Regent Charles. The council of ministers was called for tomorrow morning.

SAVE PALESTINE FROM ZIONISTS, ARABS ASKED

CAIRO, Egypt, July 15 (AP)—Abdel Rahman Azzam Bey, secretary general of the Pan-Arab league, appealed to the league's member nations tonight to "save Palestinian land from the biggest aggression raid of all history—the raid of Zionist aggression. Your sister nation," he told the Arab states, "has fallen into the claws of Zionist imperialism."

Azzam Bey told delegates at the first meeting of the league's new economic subcommittee that the league intends not only "to protect the interests" of member states but also will "fight" for the interests of all Arab states.

"The struggle for Palestinian land," he said, "is a struggle between international Zionist policy and the inherited right of a thousand years of an Arab nation."

U-BOAT LANDING REPORT STIRS BUENOS AIRES

Find Public Doubtful of Official Denial

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, July 15—Belief that the 700 ton German U-boat 530 disembarked passengers on the Argentine coast prior to surrendering was gaining ground with the Buenos Aires public despite a denial from Argentine authorities. The authorities, after questioning the submarine's commander, announced that nobody had been landed.

The public also considers unlikely that 22 year old Otto Wermoutt was really the U-boat's commander, and suspicions have been aroused that the real commander, together with other "war criminals" were now guests at German owned estates.

See Change in Treatment

Buenos Aires newspaper men believe that public opinion will likely force the government to abandon its "kid glove treatment" of German prisoners, and ridiculed their suggested internment on the island of Martin Garcia, from which crew members of the German pocket battleship Graf Spee found little difficulty in escaping.

The Graf Spee was sunk following a naval engagement with a British task force and its crew interned by Argentina.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Buenos Aires said that the German U-boat 530, including the commander, Capt. Otto Wermoutt, had been brought to Buenos Aires and placed aboard an Argentine naval ship which left for Martin Gracia Island, where Germans will be held as war prisoners. The Germans were transferred from Mar del Plata, where the U-boat was surrendered to Argentina July 10, the dispatch said.]

Eases Political Tension

The submarine incident has distracted attention from the growing political tension which has followed Vice President Juan Peron's recent statement that he was prepared to play a role in any possible civil war. The appearance in Buenos Aires of placards and leaflets acclaiming "Peron for President," was viewed as one more step in the campaign reportedly designed to demonstrate the people's "overwhelming demand" that Peron retract his pledge to refrain from running for the presidency.

Some Argentines call Peron "potentially the most dangerous man Argentina has seen in many generations."

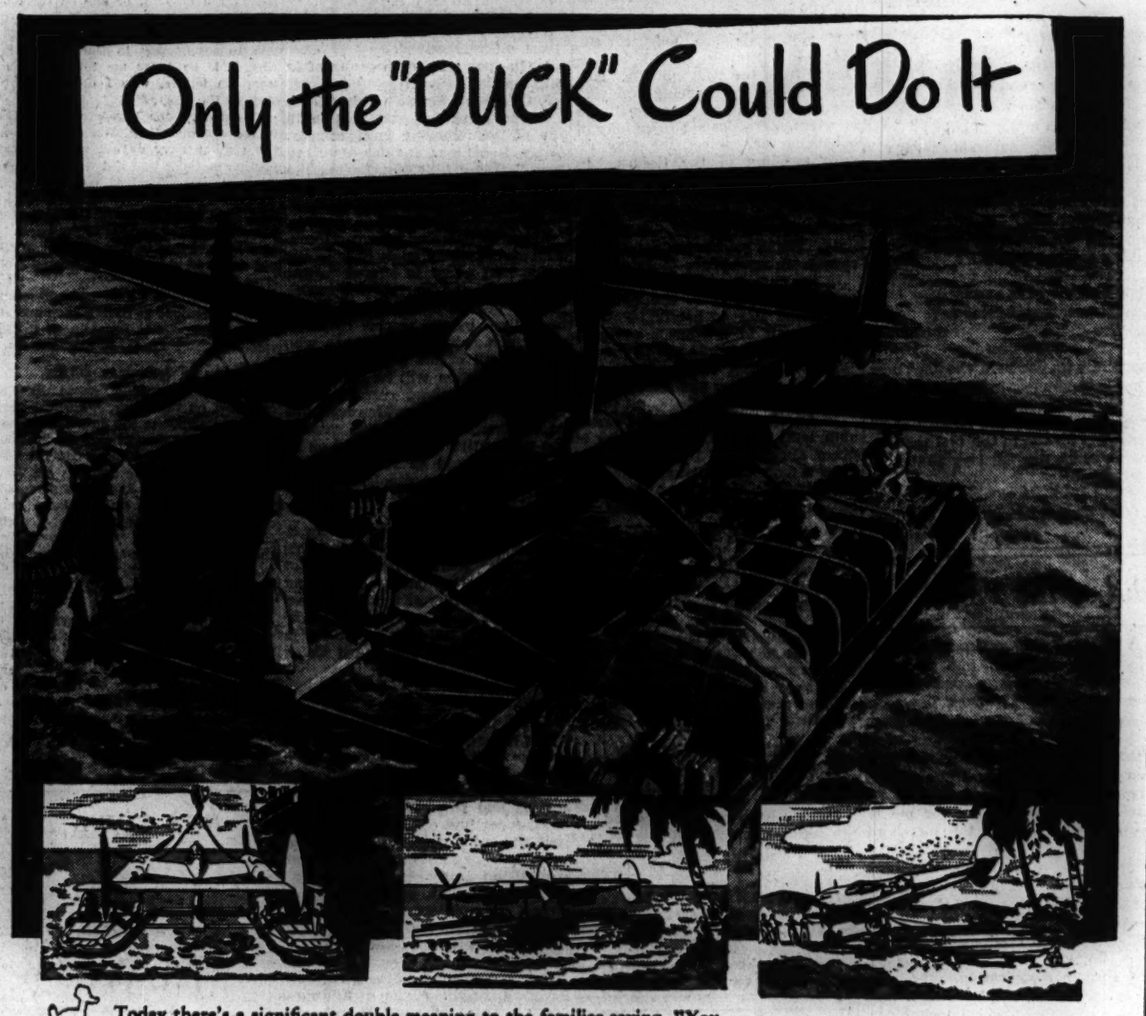
Only the "DUCK" Could Do It



Today there's a significant double meaning to the familiar saying, "You can never tell where lightning will strike next." Thanks to the amphibious ability of the GMC "Duck," fast-flying Lightning or P-38 fighter planes can be transported directly from ship to shore to inland flying field . . . assembled and all set for a take-off that will take the enemy by surprise.

In fact, wherever Allied fighting forces need a multiple-ton transport vehicle that can travel by water as well as by land, there you'll usually find GMC's sensational seagoing truck—the "Duck." This amazing amphibian, like the Army's basic 2½-ton, six-wheel drive transport truck, is a development of GMC Truck & Coach . . . producer of well over a half a million military vehicles.

Signal Corps photo and drawings show how two GMC "Ducks," fastened together with steel bars and cables, transport a P-38 fighter plane. The plane is carried backward to provide proper weight distribution and buoyancy. Main landing wheels of the plane fit into steel troughs which are attached to the side of each "Duck."

In addition to being one of the largest producers of military vehicles, GMC builds many commercial trucks for essential users. Civilian GMCs are powered by engines of the same basic design as the famous "270" used in more than 475,000 GMC "six-by-sixes" . . . the "Workhorse of the Army."

REWARDING AGGRESSION

The senate's foreign relations committee has voted 21 to one to recommend ratification of the San Francisco charter. The committee gave five days to the hearing of testimony for and against the treaty, but it has been apparent from the start that the members' minds were made up.

It is only fair to the senators to say that most of them are well aware that the treaty is a fraud in the sense that it isn't going to accomplish the avowed purpose of preventing wars, and big ones in particular. Obviously it isn't going to do that because the method relied upon is joint action against the aggressor and each of the great powers is given a veto against joint action directed against it and its satellites. This amounts to legalizing aggression. The senators defend the treaty with the baby blue argument that if the arrangement can't do any good, neither can it do any particular harm.

The most useful testimony the committee received came from Mr. John T. Flynn because he addressed himself precisely to this proposition. He called attention to the fact that if we accept the treaty, we shall take to our bosom not only the imperialisms of western Europe but also the ruthless totalitarianism of soviet Russia. Our political alliance will be accompanied by the economic alliance outlined in the Bretton Woods proposals and supplemented by huge loans.

Mr. Flynn reminded the senators that we shall not be comfortable in this association. The false promise that the treaty will prevent wars masks the real purpose to bleed us of our wealth for the benefit of Europe and Russia in particular. The cardinal dogma of our Russian allies is the inevitability of conflict between their economic and social system and ours. They believe that both systems cannot survive and for their part they mean to bring the whole world to communism.

Any one familiar with communist attitudes and scriptures is familiar with the avowed purpose of destroying political and economic liberty as we know it, wherever it exists and by whatever means are available. Mr. Flynn wanted to know if the senators, after ratifying the San Francisco charter, intended to pour money into Europe and into Russia in particular, with the result that we would face financial ruin while Russia would be immensely strengthened economically for the conflict she regards as inevitable.

Mr. Flynn was a leading spirit in the old America First movement. Friday was a proud day for him. He could say to the senators with complete candor that he did not believe a war with Russia necessary or desirable. The same reasons which led him to oppose the drift into the war that began in 1939 inevitably lead him to oppose a future war against Russia.

The inconsistency is all on the side of the one-worlders. They who howled for war against an aggressive, totalitarian Germany are today in bed with aggressive, totalitarian Russia. When Hitler, having taken Austria and Czechoslovakia, marched against Poland, America was told that our country's safety required that we side with the victims. Today Stalin has Austria and Czechoslovakia and Poland, not to mention Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, and half of Germany; yet the same people who demanded war by America on Germany are insisting that Russia's military potential be strengthened with loans and gifts intended to build up her munitions industries.

Mr. Flynn's testimony obviously had no effect on the committee's decision to approve the San Francisco treaty. We may hope that his words will not be forgotten when the lending program is under consideration.

JUDICIAL INTEGRITY

The investigation of the acts of federal District Judge Albert W. Johnson of the middle district of Pennsylvania by a house judiciary subcommittee has provided an extraordinary commentary on the degradation of judicial office in recent years. Judge Johnson, who retired under fire, has been accused of the most flagrant abuse of his position of trust and has offered little to controvert the testimony against him.

The judiciary committee, like every other house committee, has a New Deal majority. Judge Johnson was appointed by a Republican President in 1925. The New Dealers can develop the case against him to the fullest extent, knowing that it will injure only their political opposition.

The chairman of the investigating committee is Rep. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, executive director of the notorious One Thousand club, by which the New Deal in the last Presidential campaign proselyted campaign fund contributors at $1,000 a head. In his letter to prospects for membership, Mr. Kefauver frankly declared his hope of raising 1 million dollars to support the fourth term.

"The suggestion," Mr. Kefauver wrote, "came from the President himself. He said he would like to have 1,000 business people who would show their interest in his reelection by giving $1,000 and that he would like to counsel and advise with them thru the rest of his term. The policy has been adopted by members of the club who happen to be in Washington on Thursday afternoons to have a visit with the President at the White House. . . . Of course, there are matters coming up in which the membership in the One Thousand club would not do any harm. Each member receives a copper plated identification plate and certificate which is all the pass they need in Washington to go anywhere."

This constituted an unabashed promise of special consideration from the White House and New Deal departments for any one who bought his way in at the price of $1,000. It is impossible to draw any moral distinction between this sort of bribery and the kind charged to Judge Johnson, except that in the one instance a court of justice was on the auction block, and in the other the office of the President.

Those interested may carry the parallel farther in comparing the behavior of the judge to that of Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, who is said to have used his connections to "borrow" up to $800,000 in loans, the overwhelming proportion of which were since defaulted. Among the victims were business men who saw tangible prospects of being injured by discriminatory legislation. Then there is Col. James Roosevelt who earned a huge income by selling insurance to persons and business firms which might expect collateral benefits from the salesman's family connections. Again, Mrs. Roosevelt, with no native professional skill, drew a huge income from her writings, some of which were peddled at $500 an article to a corporation whose owner had lent her son, Elliott, $200,000.

The country judge is charged with selling justice. If he's guilty he ought to be punished. We think that should go for all who turn public trust and influence to private profit, whether they are Republicans or Democrats.

A POORER COUNTRY

The discharged soldier returning from the scenes of great destruction will be curious about how America got along during the war. One of the changes he will be sure to note is that everybody seems to have lots more money to spend. The soldier will recall that the people had plenty of francs in France, and no one ever saw so much money as many of the Nazis had in paper marks. If our young man has a liking for figures, he may turn to the government bulletins and discover that the average American now has three times as much cash as he had at the time of Pearl Harbor, four times as many dollars' worth of government bonds, twice as much in his checking account at the bank, and half again as much to his credit in a savings account. He will also learn that in three years after December, 1941, the total ownership by individuals of cash, bank balances, and government bonds has gone up 70 billion dollars.

If such assets are wealth, then the people of America have indeed grown rich during the war. But how were these new riches created, in which everybody has a share? They came from the government's buying everything it needed to supply our armies and the armies of other countries. The treasury made payment in large part by issuing bonds, which were turned into currency at the banks, and then distributed among the people in payment of their services. What was bought by the government has largely gone to Europe. The people have left some of the funds the government paid out, and the government has a debt to pay.

If the people of a nation could be enriched by adding to their stock of currency, bank deposits, and bonds, printing presses and delivery boys could bring about an economic millennium. And if it could be done in America, it could be done everywhere else. If this is the royal road to wealth, UNRRA should forget everything else and concentrate on type and printing presses. The ex-service man knows from experience that liquid wealth isn't wealth at all, or the people of France wouldn't have stood for it when the De Gaulle government recently required them to turn in a lot of their money and receive new money of lower denomination in exchange.

The real wealth of the United States is no different from the real wealth of France. It is our houses, automobiles, office buildings, street cars, railroad trains, factories, and machinery. As regards all of these categories we are poorer than when our young man went into service, and he can see that this is true by looking about him.

When he rides in the same old jerky street car that he rode in four years ago, he looks out upon the same houses, factories, and store buildings that he used to see, only they are four years older. Taking houses alone, he will not need to be reminded that we are poorer. The life of an American dwelling is hardly more than a third of a century. Merely to offset the ravages of time and not to add to the supply, nor to take account of obsolescence, it would be necessary to rebuild 3 per cent of the houses every year. In Chicago alone, it would have required 24,000 new houses a year or 72,000 houses in the last three years to maintain our wealth in housing. Only a little more than 10,000 new places to live have been erected in the three year period, one-seventh of what was needed to hold our own.

Automobile manufacture stopped early in 1942. It is common practice to consider the life of an automobile as five years. The deterioration of our cars, while no replacement was being made, means that the real wealth represented by our automobiles is not half what it was at the time of Pearl Harbor.

In the same way factories, offices, churches and schools have been wearing out and new structures have not been put up to replace them. We have a few new war factories and have expanded the productive capacity of some of the old ones, but much of this new equipment had a specialized war time use, and will be abandoned or scrapped after the war. Lathes, drills, conveyors, newspaper printing presses and much other equipment have been getting older and new ones have not been purchased to replace the wealth used up.

The processes of depreciation and deterioration have destroyed large amounts of our physical assets during the war, just as surely as bombs and cannon did the wealth of Europe. It will be years before the nation will offset the loss the war has caused us. Our government officials and others who look only at the statistics of our liquid assets and conclude that we can give unlimited help to others are blind and foolish. If there are nations which have gotten rich out of the war, the United States is not one of them.

PATHS OF GLORY

[The rich rewards of poetic effort—in the Line]

If you are a poet [and who isn't, these days?] you are probably already aware that the most precious reward of your art is art itself. You have written your verses and, no matter how blind the world may be, no matter if editors are as undiscerning as Duke Bakrak's spouse, you know your work is good. Does anything else matter?

* * *

We offer a special word of welcome and congratulation today to the vast army of new poets who, having diligently studied our course of Easy Lessons, achieved success—in varying degree—in one short week. All of them succeeded, as we predicted they would. Some reached the summit, the Line itself. Others attained the lesser splendor of the bin, from which they will one day emerge to—what? To the proud parade of printer's ink? Or to the possibly greater honor of helping the Boy Scouts win the war with salvaged paper?

* * *

To the Line's veteran poets there is no need of pointing out the economic advantage of their position. But newcomers may be comforted to know that their income tax never will be affected one way or another by their contributions to the Line. Thru all these years, thru periods of deep depression and of dangerous inflation, the Line, under all its managements, from B. L. T. to Dr. Collins, has had the decent delicacy to refrain from affronting its contributors with such crudities as cash.

We conclude this elegy with lines written in part [say 50 per cent] by Thomas Gray:

The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Are tasteless, trivial, valueless, and sour
Compared with payments which Line poets waive.

SONNET

I know the tumult of thy stormy breast,
O mighty Ocean, great to do and dare;
I see thy courage, challenging despair—
The hope, ambition, failure, and unrest;
As one who would pursue a hopeless quest
In realms that lie above his common sphere,
And, still pursuing, shun those things so near
That school his undeveloped spirit best.
So might I on this lonely shore upraise
My voice and strength in thy rebellious mood,
And strive to reach beyond life's humbler ways,
One—only one among the multitude;
While thou, in thy immensity, O Sea,
Dost writhe and groan for all humanity!

Circa When?

Linemaster: A brief glimpse of a local bathing beach was too much for me, and as I turned away I recalled those days when the ladies went swimming with stockings and shoes, gloves that reached to sleeve-ends, wearing a hat, and carrying a parasol. That last rather stumped me until I figured it must be in case of rain. In those days, the gals went shrieking into the water, splashed around until the water penetrated the costume to the skin, at which time, of course, things had gone far enough and the swim ended.

Those were days when women had a mysterious means of locomotion not common to men and if any man said the word "leg" there were cries of shame and horror, the while the gals gave him a speculative eye—this guy might have possibilities.

There was also a myth to the effect that a man went down on his knees and proposed marriage to the woman of his choice. Any man who was that rash ran a good chance of finding himself in a hammer lock or half nelson, while papa appeared in the doorway with a shotgun. One philosopher spent years trying to find a man who had actually proposed to his wife, but he died suddenly—reason being, he found one.

J. A. B. writes: "I just have been given a medical discharge from the navy. I was a chief pharmacist's mate and still would like to be back in service. Is there a chance for me to obtain a limited assignment in the merchant marine?"

Yes. Apply at the merchant marine enrolling office, 844 Rush st., for limited service assignment. Limited service men with 1-C and 4-F draft classifications are being accepted by the merchant marine, provided their disabilities are not too serious. In your case you may be enlisted at your former navy rating. The merchant marine is especially eager to obtain men with degrees in chemistry, medical technology, pharmacy, osteopathy, and physical therapy. Ratings open range from pharmacist's mate third class at $109.20 a month to chief at $193.20. When quarters are not provided, an allowance of $90 is paid.

Mrs. R. M. P. writes: "My family allowance has been overpaid $220. I was informed recently by the office of dependency benefits that monthly deductions would be made from my check until the overpayment is cancelled. Now I learn that my husband is about to be discharged. Only $10 has been deducted from my checks. Will the unpaid part of the overpayment be deducted from my husband's mustering out pay, the $100 he has on deposit with the government, and his accrued pay at time of discharge?

Any sum owing to the government may be deducted from your husband's accrued pay, but his mustering out pay cannot be attached or levied against for debt. Neither can his soldiers' deposit be taken. Other arrangements will have to be made for repayment of the debt to the ODB.

HIVES MAY INVOLVE SKIN OR DEEPER TISSUES

We have all heard the expression, "As busy as a one-armed man with hives." This realistic comparison gives some conception of the intense desire to scratch that accompanies a certain type of hives [urticaria]. When the lesions are confined to the surface of the body, the nerve endings located in this region are irritated and itching results. As a rule the arms, thighs, and trunk are the favored sites.

But occasionally deeper structures are implicated and we refer to the condition as "angioneurotic edema" or "giant hives." The hands, feet, lips, or eyelids may exhibit puffy areas. Occasionally, the tongue, throat, or the digestive tract are affected, with more serious manifestations. The mucous membrane lining of the larynx may swell to such an extent that breathing is interfered with, and involvement of the wall of the alimentary canal may produce nausea, vomiting, cramps, or diarrhea.

What is the cause of this annoying condition? Many theories have been set forth but the most likely explanation is allergy. This is especially true in acute bouts which are usually observed in children and young adults. In older persons the affliction may be more or less chronic, with remissions of a few days to a few months. Frequently, no sensitivity can be demonstrated and we are forced to believe that other factors play a part. These include fatigue, constipation, lack of hydrochloric acid in the stomach, disturbance of liver function, and focal infections. Heredity and psychic upsets are also possible origins.

Foods are the most important offenders in hives, just as pollens are the culprits in hay fever. The acute form can generally be traced to seasonal produce: strawberries, raspberries, cantaloupes, and watermelons. This explains the prevalence of the disorder in the spring and summer months. Shellfish and nuts come high on the list. In the chronic type, basic articles such as eggs, milk, and wheat are well known irritants.

There is a great variation in the response of the individual to the same dish. In some instances, the first ingestion results in discomfort; subsequent eating of that item will do no harm. Again, excessive consumption may give rise to trouble, while smaller portions are well tolerated.

Drugs, such as headache remedies, sedatives, and laxatives may act as "starters." Physical agents must be considered. Edema of the hands may appear after plunging them into icy water; whereas others emerge from a hot bath displaying the wheals.

If symptoms are marked, the noxious substance should be removed from the body quickly. This may be done by inducing vomiting but a saline cathartic is usually as effective. Hypodermic injections of ephedrine or epinephrine may reduce swelling of the tissues. In most cases, relief of itching is all that is called for and this may be accomplished by applying calamine lotion, diluted vinegar, or baking soda. Baths containing oatmeal or cornstarch may prove soothing.

In the chronic variety, reinjection of small amounts of the patient's own blood may be helpful. Restriction of salt in the meals prevents the collection of fluid in the tissues. Because alcohol has a deleterious influence on many victims, it should be avoided.

In an attempt to find the cause, skin tests are not as helpful as in other allergies. If the patient will keep a food diary, the culprits may be detected. Sometimes the elimination diet will achieve this end.

SKILL NEEDED

W. H. writes: Why is it necessary for a psychiatrist to treat psychoneurosis? Why can't an ordinary physician handle such cases?

REPLY

In the majority, it is not, but is preferred because of the length of time necessary in bringing about a cure. Like many other disorders, the more difficult cases may need a specialist's attention.

TREATMENT NEEDED

G. H. writes: Is diet of any value in the treatment of rectal abscess?

REPLY

Foods low in roughage will add to the patient's comfort but will not cure the abscess. It must be drained surgically.

WORN OUT CELLS

R. T. writes: How many blood cells are destroyed daily?

REPLY

The figure has been estimated at 10,000,000 per second.

Secret, Secret, Secret

It looks as tho from now on the army and navy will have to fight this war alone. Within a month there won't be a man left in the marine corps, for after some long weeks of thinking of themselves as the forgotten men in the point system for discharge, the marines now have evolved their own point system. It appeared recently in The Chevron, marine corps publication, in the form of a memorandum to the Fleet Marine Force, Pacific.

A marine's discharge is simply effected. All it takes is 100 points and an application accompanied by enforcing signatures of the commander in chief, all members of congress, the applicant's commanding general, his wife, mother-in-law, and all offspring.

The computation of points follows a strict schedule:

1. One point for each four year enlistment performed overseas.
2. One point for each group of five major campaigns.
3. One point for each Purple Heart medal received.
4. One point for each group of 10 children.
5. One point for each lady friend.
6. One point for participation in any of the following engagements: Boxer Rebellion, Spanish-American war, Battle of Bull Run, Boston Tea party, engagements with the Tripoli pirates.

"Persons deceased," the memorandum states, "may apply only in the event that proof is offered to the effect that the party in question has no special aptitude which can be utilized by the marine corps.

"Any member of the corps who has lost all of his extremities due to enemy action will be taken into consideration under certain extenuating circumstances. However, due to the laxity shown in this respect, the application will be passed on by a special board of review set up immediately upon completion of the present conflict with the enemy."

In order to qualify for an application upon which to submit his score, the marine must have at least 32 teeth, four good conduct medals, the Order of the Bath, Cross of St. John, and congressional medal of honor and must be a member in good standing of the Royal Order of Buffalo.

Cupid Collected Cash

Eight months or so ago a troop train paused at a crossing near the village of Elmhurst, holding up a flock of high school girls who were sauntering home from school. The troops and the girls both thought this opportune. The soldiers hung out the train windows in open admiration. The girls stood below and tossed up saucy badinage. It all came to a pretty, pre-ordained pass when the soldiers asked the girls for their names and addresses. You will be surprised to know that the girls said no, but that is Elmhurst for you. Unknown to the girls, however, a bright young Elmhurst urchin [age: 9] sneaked onto the train and raced up and down the aisle of one car offering to sell the girls' names and addresses. For the numbers he considered especially neat, he asked 25 cents. For others he asked 10 cents or a nickel. Altogether, he made $2.80. A heated correspondence sprang up between the two groups, continuing when the boys went overseas. Just thought you'd like to know that one couple, who still haven't been any closer to one another than that one impossible leap from train window to ground, now are engaged to be married.

FAVORITISM IN THE NAVY

Chicago, July 10—In connection with a recent editorial in your paper about regular vs. reserve officers, you might be interested in a letter from my son. He is captain of his ship and commanding officer of a division of five mine layers under certain circumstances, and he had citations from Admirals Kinkaid [silver star] and Barbey [personal commendation]. He wears seven ribbons and seven stars. He writes:

"I have got the last word regarding that school at Annapolis. It was conceived as an experiment and there were over 2,000 applicants, which is a lot in one sense but not many out of 400,000 reserve officers in the navy. There were 30 accepted, that being the capacity set for the class. I do know one fellow out here whose application was accepted, a staff man on an admiral's staff. The admiral gave him a wonderful, whopping big indorsement on his application. This is a typical navy way of doing things and more than ever cements my desire to get out and try it on my own, not subject to the whims and bootlicking necessary to get anything.

"Just consider the relative qualifications of a man who sits all day doing paper work, in the relative security of a desk job, not going to sea and taking his chances there, and myself, on board one ship for over four years, a ship that has done as much if not more than any other four-piper in the navy in the way of action. Who gets the school? The staff man with the big indorsement from the admiral. So it goes. It is hard for a civilian, or one on the outside to know exactly what it is like in the navy. That is why it is easy for you to say, 'Stay in the navy,' and why it is hard for me to explain, at least via letters, why I don't want to stay in the navy.

"Last summer all reserve officers had to say whether they wanted to get in the regular navy or not and the proportion of those that did was about one in every 500. That is why Secretary Forrestal tells the boys at the academy that they have to make the navy life attractive to the reserve so he wants to stay in, and that is why 499 officers did not want to stay in. We couldn't all have been wrong!"

I understand that among the 30 whom my son mentions as having been accepted for Annapolis is Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. MRS. G. E. HACHTMANN

NAVY MEDICAL CARE

Chicago, July 10—I would like to comment on the letter, "Medical Care in Boot Camp," in the July 7 TRIBUNE. My son was at Great Lakes for his boot training and I am sure he had the best of medical care. The first day he wore his navy shoes his feet were blistered. The navy doctors treated them only once and they were completely cured. His comment was, "The navy cures things it would take an ordinary doctor weeks to cure." After the "shots" he did not feel well and was put to bed for the day.

Before training was completed, he was transferred to the Seabees in Rhode Island. The long train ride and the last shots given him made him feel very bad. He had a fever of 101. He was immediately placed in the hospital and stayed there for four days, until he was completely well. He is of the opinion that the navy takes the best of care of its men. MOTHER OF A BOOT

"BACKED TO THE LIMIT"

Chicago, July 12—As I bring to a close my duties as Cook county chairman for the Mighty 7th War Loan, one of my most pleasant duties is to express appreciation for the fine coöperation with which I was favored from all quarters. However, it is in no spirit of a mere thank you noté that I am writing now to you. The innumerable contributions of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE toward the success of this great drive were so outstanding and so far beyond the range of reasonable expectations that I find it impossible to express adequately in words my deep sense of gratitude for all that you and your staff have done.

Aid came to us from all sides—news editors, reporters, editorial and financial writers, photographers, cartoonists, illustrators, and from your classified and display advertising departments. Your people entered into the drive from the first day, and their efforts continued unabated to the very end. The "Dad from GI Joe" promotion gave a fresh and strong appeal that was very much welcomed. The daily thermometer in your news columns was a continuous stimulant to our activities. Thru it all, we sensed that THE TRIBUNE was backing us to the limit, and the tremendous force of your paper had much to do with the success which we were able to achieve. LAWRENCE F. STERN

SUGAR ALLOTMENTS

Chicago, July 5—Why all the OPA discrimination thruout Cook county in allotting sugar for canning? The writer's application was filled out early. There was no action until the last week in June, then for a quota of three pounds each for my wife and myself, or a total of six pounds. What can you do in canning with so little? Meanwhile, I have knowledge of allotments of 15 pounds per person at other rationing boards. Why the difference in allotments, all in the same township? When I asked OPA, I was informed, "We have no jurisdiction. We get our orders from Chicago."

We are an aged couple with two ration books allowed us. Compare this with a family of four children [all under 6 years of age], who are allowed 6 books, with one of the children but 10 days old. They get 90 pounds of sugar on the 15 pound allowance. What good is a dollar to us if we have no points to purchase the necessities of living? A. B. KIMBALL

MARRIAGE BY PROXY

Chicago, July 14—Can a resident of this state be married by proxy? E. B.

Marriages could be contracted by proxy under the Roman law and under English law until the 18th century. Presumably the same rules hold in such of our states as have not by statute required a ceremony of the presence of the parties. [See Schouler on Marriage, etc., 6th edition, Sec. 1212.] The Illinois statute, however, by using the words "celebrate" and "solemnize" implies the necessity for a ceremony with the physical presence of the parties.

We are confident that if news accounts of proxy marriages were followed up, it would be found that in a large proportion of the cases an ordinary civil ceremony is celebrated later. In other words, well informed and careful persons do not take chances on the validity of such an important step.

DOES YOUR ADVERTISING MAKE TOO MANY SLEEPER JUMPS?

Advertising often has the fault of other salesmen—not enough attention to small towns. These days, because of slow shipments and infrequent calls by salesmen, merchants in the smaller places often think they are not getting enough cooperation from their suppliers.

Since 56 percent of the retail outlets of the U.S.A. are in towns of less than 25,000 population, the good will and confidence of this market is a prize worth cultivating.

Published weekly for thinking people in small cities and towns, PATHFINDER has a large portion of its circulation among the merchants on Main Street. Your advertisement in this vigorous news magazine is an effective way of making frequent appreciated contacts with small city dealers and their customers.

ONE YEAR LATER: ALL'S QUIET ON NORMAN BEACH

Tribune Writer Flies Over Historic Scene

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, July 15—The Normandy beachheads, where a year ago the American invasion forces were fighting and dying to establish a bridgehead on the continent of Europe, today are calm and serene, with French fishermen using abandoned assault boats, and French farmers filling in shell and bomb craters and reconstructing their shattered homes.

This afternoon I inspected the invasion area over the stretch of 100 miles between Caen and Cherbourg, from a comfortable seat in a British passenger plane flying from Lisbon to England.

We had a tail wind, which put us ahead of schedule, so the pilot detoured and flew only a couple of hundred feet off the ground to give a closeup of this vital naval and military battlefield.

Cuts to St. Nazaire

We left Lisbon at 9 a. m., flying over a corner of Spain and cutting across the Bay of Biscay to the St. Nazaire base on the Brittany peninsula, where a German garrison held out for months.

We skimmed over battered Rennes and churned-up Mortain, where Marshal Kesserling made his supreme effort to slice thru the American lines and communications after Gen. Patton broke away at Avranches and starting rolling westward.

We swooped low over the rubble of Caen, where the British smashed the hinge of Hitler's Atlantic wall, and reached the English Channel at Courseulles. Skimming the sea, we flashed past artificial Mulberry harbor off Arromanches, where blockships and sacrificed freighters form a breakwater.

Wrecked Ships Abound

Norman salts in scarlet trousers dragged nets and towed trolling lines among the wreckage of destroyers, landing craft, and troopships blasted by Nazi batteries. Hundreds of riddled, rusted steel stormboats still litter the beaches, some with gaping holes and ripped sides.

Studding the seafront I counted scores of German pillboxes and concrete artillery positions with twisted gun barrels pointed crazily skyward, where the American warships' bombardment pulverized opposition.

Norman farmers, with flowing whiskers and wooden sabots, guided big-rumped Norman horses carefully past white crosses as they plowed the fields where Yank heroes fell.

Peasant Women Toil

Around the bend, where the Cherbourg peninsula juts northward, we glided over Sainte Mere Eglise, where hedgerow snipers slaughtered GI's, and Norman peasant women, hooded and smocked, toiled among the shattered orchards, cleaning out riven apple trees to insure next year's vintage of Calvados' cider brandy.

Then we swept on to Barfleur, key position dominating Cherbourg. Thence we climbed steeply to cross the channel, fly over the Isle of Wight, and sit down at Hurn airport near here.

We made the flight from Lisbon to Hurn, nearly 1,000 miles, in exactly five hours, but it required exactly five hours more to reach London, 110 miles away. We waited at the afrport a couple of hours for a special train and then spent three hours in it.

THREE MEDICAL SCHOOLS TO BE OPENED IN REICH

PARIS, July 15 (AP)—Three of seven German medical schools, including the University of Heidelberg, will open Sept. 1, Maj. Gen. M. C. Stayer said today, if the necessary equipment, a faculty, and coal to heat the buildings can be assembled.

Gen. Stayer, chief of the public health branch, G-5, United States forces in the European theater, said there was a serious need in Germany for well educated physicians and surgeons as German medicine declined badly during the Hitler period. He said that in order to protect the health of allied troops it is necessary that German health be kept at a high level. He added that many German prisoners were in bad health.

Stayer said present plans call for the matriculation of 300 doctors for advanced training at Heidelberg, 500 students at Marberg university, and 300 students at Erlangen university, adding that the other schools were too badly damaged to function.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

July 16—Commodore McDougal

Eighty-two years ago today American and Japanese guns belched fire at each other in a brisk naval skirmish which served as a remote prelude to the heaven splitting battles of the present war.

At 11 o'clock on the morning of July 16, 1863, Commodore David Stockton McDougal of the United States navy took his ship, the steam sloop Wyoming, into the Strait of Shimonoseki, between the Japanese islands of Honshu and Kyushu. He had ordered his men to quarters and had all small arms loaded, for it was in these waters a few weeks earlier that the American merchant ship Pembroke had been fired upon by order of the Prince of Nagato, a local potentate who cared little for the treaty of amity which the United States and Japan had concluded nine years earlier.

McDougal's precautions were justified almost immediately, for as the Wyoming entered the strait, shore batteries began firing on her. Her own guns barked into action and there was a running duel as she churned along toward the three armed Japanese craft which were at anchor near the city of Shimonoseki.

The first Japanese ship, a bark, fired a broadside as the Wyoming drew abreast. The Americans replied in kind, then began dividing their fire between the two other Japanese craft, a brig and a steamer. The brig drew up her anchor and made for the Kyushu shore. The steamer, too, hurried off, but the Wyoming had come about and after a brief chase overtook her.

There was a terrific detonation as the American ship's port battery flung shot and shell into the steamer. The latter immediately was enveloped in steam and smoke. Her engines stopped and she drifted ashore. The Wyoming then went on to hurl more fire into the brig, the bark, and the land batteries. When she issued from the strait, she had been under fire 70 minutes, had lost four men killed and seven wounded, and had suffered some damage.

McDougal's primary mission in the far east was to watch for Confederate raiders [the Civil war was then in progress]. While he was at Yokohama, he heard of the attack on the Pembroke and almost immediately left for Shimonoseki.

KIRKBEAN, Scotland, July 15 (AP)—The memory of John Paul Jones was honored today at the dedication of a baptismal font in Jones' home town on the southwestern Scottish coast. The font was given to the parishioners of Kirkbean thru contributions by American sailors and naval officers stationed in Britain.

SPAIN ORDERS SURRENDER OF NAZI PROPERTY

MADRID, Spain, July 15 [Reuters]—German official property and valuables held by Spaniards or foreigners in Spain must be surrendered, an official note issued by the Spanish ministry of foreign affairs said today.

The property and valuables include considerable quantities of cash, precious metals, documents, furniture and office equipment, motor cars, and objects of art, which were removed from premises occupied by the German government or concerns under its control before the Spanish government took them over for the allies.

The note ends with a warning that Spanish and foreign subjects not complying with this order will be prosecuted, as will those who know of cases covered by the order and fail to report them.

Lights Go On Again; Time Switched Hour in London

LONDON, July 15 (AP)—The lights went on in London again tonight after nearly six years of inky blackout that had become so much a part of things most people had forgotten what street lights were like. The great switch-on coincided wtih the elimination of another war time measure — double summer time. Clocks were put back to only one hour ahead of standard time. Thousands flocked into the streets.

N. Y. NEWSPAPER STRIKERS IGNORE FIRING THREAT

New York, July 15 (AP)—The head of New York's striking newspaper delivery men said after a mass meeting today that the work stoppage would continue despite a warning from publishers that the strikers would be dismissed unless they returned to work tomorrow.

Joseph Simons, president of the Newspaper and Mail Deliverers' union [unaffiliated], also said "several unions affiliated with the newspaper industry have agreed to support the strike financially."

The strike, now in its third week, has tied up distribution of 14 major dailies and three racing forms.

Advised of today's action by the union, the publishers' association, in a statement, reiterated its warning that workers failing to report to work tomorrow would be dismissed.

The strike resulted from failure of union and publisher representatives to negotiate a new contract to replace one which expired June 30. Chief issue is a union demand for the publishers to establish a welfare fund for union members.

NIMITZ TO TALK ON AIR TONIGHT FROM PACIFIC

Meet Your Navy Program to Carry Address

BY LARRY WOLTERS

Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, speaking from the Pacific, will be heard on the Great Lakes Naval Training center's "Meet Your Navy" program over WENR and the American network at 8 o'clock tonight.

The program, now four years old, is making its debut as a Monday night show tonight. Previously it was heard on Saturdays. Subject of Adm. Nimitz' talk has not been announced.

This navy show, which also features pickups from the fighting fronts, has been relayed overseas in recorded form for several years. Now plans are under way to give navy men abroad a look at it, too. Shooting is about to start on a special motion picture built around the show. This movie is to be made primarily for distribution overseas.

Meet Your Navy continues to offer music by well known singers, now in uniform, the Great Lakes choirs, rhythm band, and ship's orchestra. Bill Thompson, formerly with the Fibber McGee show, is the mainstay in the comedy department. Durward Kirby is the master of ceremonies.

The Radio Manufacturers' association reports the outlook for new home receivers for fall and winter delivery still is uncertain. Changing and heavy military requirements are given as the reason. The association explained that so far cutbacks in military contracts are spotty and that production of war goods remains high. A substantial volume of receivers are expected in the first quarter of 1946.

Former President Herbert Hoover is scheduled for a 15 minute discussion of "The San Francisco Charter and the Progress Toward Peace" at 6 p. m. Wednesday over WBBM-CBS.

WOMAN KILLED BY FALL OUT OF CAR ON CURVE

Mrs. Catherine Snyder, 52, formerly of South Bend, Ind., was killed yesterday when she fell from an automobile driven by her brother, C. Gylling, in Munster, Ind.

She had sold her home in South Bend and was en route to live with a sister, Mrs. Ernest Weil, 8308 Elizabeth st., Chicago, who also was in the car, together with Mrs. Snyder's daughter, Doris, 5.

Police said she apparently fell from the car when a door flew open while the machine was turning a corner. She was dead on arrival at St. Margaret's hospital in Hammond.

YOUNG TAVERN BANDITS FACE 75 COMPLAINTS

Seventy-five complaints of armed robbery were signed yesterday against 10 young men, between the ages of 16 and 26, who have confessed their loot in Chicago tavern robberies since Jan. 1 totaled more than $35,000.

Facing more than 150 victims in a showup in the detective bureau, the gang evinced some atonement by solving several robberies. When victims expressed doubt about an identification, the gang robber involved himself, recalled incidents of the particular robbery, or identified the person he robbed.

Robert Kozak, 17, of 2107 W. 19th st., a former inmate of the Illinois State Training School for Boys, was named leader of the gang. His accomplices are David Tenucci, 21, of 432 S. Hoyne av.; Sam Paul, 23, of 1810 Jackson blvd.; Ralph Lipowski, 16, of 2011 W. 18th st.; John Bielanski, 16, of 4112 S. Richmond st.; Edward Kotrba, 17, of 2046 W. 18th st.; Harold Borkus, 17, of 2532 S. Albany av.; Fred Litke, 26, of 2033 W. 18th st.; James Lenza, 17, of 1919 W. 17th st., and Joseph Rendak, 18, of 2037 W. 18th st.

66, HE DENIES ARMY CAN RULE HE'S 'OVER AGE'

Fairfield, Cal., July 15 (AP)—Sgt. Harry [Pop] Rudolph of Brooklyn, N. Y., who at 66 claims to be the oldest soldier on active duty in the United States army, was returned by plane from the Central Pacific today because he was considered "over age."

"There's nothing wrong with me, tho," said the veteran of three wars. "I'm staying in the army until V-J day, and I'd like to see the person who can stop me!"

Rudolph fought in the infantry during the Philippine insurrection and was a mess sergeant in the last war. When Pearl Harbor was bombed, he asked to be returned to active duty, and was finally accepted by the army air forces. He became a mess sergeant with the 20th air force on Guam.

CONTROL GROUP BEGINS GERMAN RULE IN 4 WEEKS

U. S. Divisions of Council Represented in Berlin

FRANKFURT ON THE MAIN, July 15 (AP)—Within four weeks battered Berlin will become once more one of the great government centers of Europe as the four power control council is scheduled to begin functioning the governing of occupied Germany.

Already representatives of all 12 divisions of the United States group of the control council are in Berlin as an advance unit to work out details of liaison and coöperation with the Russians, the British, and the French preparatory to the first full meeting of the control council.

By mid-August the central control council is scheduled to begin functioning, thus focusing in Berlin the allied government of Germany.

Ike to Work with Council

As American representative on the control council Gen. Eisenhower will spend part of his time in Berlin working out policies and a multitude of details with Marshal Zhukov, Field Marshal Montgomery, and other control council members.

Eisenhower, working in a spacious office here in a building which formerly housed the headquarters of I. G. Farbenindustrie, is expected to spend a large part of his time in Frankfurt, where the American occupation activities center.

Paris becomes of secondary importance, altho communications zone headquarters will remain there until the redeployment program is completed. This headquarters directs the handling of supplies, communications, and transportation for the occupation army in Germany.

Meanwhile, Marseille, Cherbourg, Rouen, and Le Havre will continue to be important centers for the Americans in the redeployment of troops and the shipment of supplies into Europe.

U. S. Headquarters Listed

Both the 12th and the 6th army groups are in the process of being dissolved. Their command functions have ceased. Gen. Bradley is expected to leave his Wiesbaden headquarters by early August to take over his new job as veterans administrator in Washington.

The American occupation armies—Gen. Patton's 3d and Lt. Gen. Haislip's 7th—have established headquarters at Munich and Augsburg respectively. Patton has his advance headquarters at Bad Tolz and the 7th is expected to move its main headquarters from Augsburg to Heidelberg.

In each of the two regions of the American zone of occupation there will be large military government detachments, one in the eastern region of Bavaria and the other in the western region, a region whose geographical boundaries have not yet been defined.

Where these detachments will be stationed permanently has not been announced.

FRENCH CHEER STATES GENERAL AT VERSAILLES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, July 15—Resistance groups continued today to reënact stirring scenes that 156 years ago led up to the French revolution.

After the symbolic "March on Bastille" yesterday, Louis Saillant, president of the national council of resistance, today led a delegation of states general of the French renaissance—1945 version of the original states general of 1789—to the old indoor tennis court at Versailles, where deputies of the third estate took the famous oath June 28, 1789, not to separate until they had given a constitution to the France of Louis XVI.

The delegates, fresh from a week's meetings during which the states general unanimously agreed France should have a new constitution and single sovereign constituent assembly, cheered enthusiastically when Saillant made a speech.

MOVIES, TENNIS AND GOLF READY FOR BERLIN GIs

Swanky Course Now Open to Yanks

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, July 15—Movies, tennis, and golf, favorites with GIs the world over, are being made available for American occupation troops here.

Special service forces have taken over four movie houses and today the Berlin garrison saw the world premiere of "Week-End at the Waldorf," with Ginger Rogers, Lana Turner, and Walter Pidgeon, at the Titania Palace.

The Wansee golf course, which in peacetime was so swanky and expensive that only a few Americans belonged to it, has been requisitioned for Yank divot diggers.

Capt. Robert Kirkpatrick of Purdue university is one of the chief sports leaders. A tennis club, The Blue White, which was one of the show places of wealthy Berliners, has been taken over for the GIs.

"Our main problem is to find teams with which we can compete," one of the American sports leaders said. The army is working on plans to fly various American teams to southwestern Germany to compete with teams of the 7th army.

Golden Glovers to Fight

The boxers in Berlin think they are especially hot. Billy Weeks who won in the New York City Golden Gloves tournament in 1937, is their coach. Golden Glovers on his team are welterweights Pvt. John Chipman and Pvt. Al Davids, Sgt. V. A. Rodriguez, a heavyweight, and Sgt. Jack Miller, divisional champion featherweight.

The athletic officer of the "Hell on Wheels" division [2d armored], Capt. Walter Nielsen, is a former player on the New York Giants professional football team. The division's baseball teams are coached by Lt. Russell Stoneham who was connected with the New York National league baseball team.

The army requisitioned the Wansee Yacht club which formerly belonged to the German navy and later to Goebbels who turned the lake resort into a center with which he hoped to impress visitors with Germany's peaceful intentions. Vast numbers of craft of all descriptions are found near the club. Swimming is restricted to pools because the lakes and rivers are polluted. The swimming coach is Capt. Edward Dierolf of Gary, Ind., and the University of Wisconsin.

Night Clubs Popular

Men who enjoy night clubs have a steadily growing choice in Berlin, itself, tho there is a possibility the Americans may place night clubs off limits as the British have done. But there is the "Skyroom" in the Titania Palace where Red Cross clubmobile girls hold forth aided by WACs, nurses, and British girls on duty in Berlin. A 16 piece orchestra of the 67th armored regiment plays there until 10 every night.

BODY FOUND ON RAIL TRACK

The body of Walter Carpenter, 46, a war plant worker, who lived at 15343 Broadway, Harvey, was found yesterday on the Grand Trunk railroad tracks in South Holland. County police said they believed Carpenter was struck by a freight train.

2 MILLION TONS U. S. FOOD SENT TO FEED EUROPE

Washington, D. C., July 15 (AP)—The army shipped 2,045,829 long tons of food, chiefly wheat and flour, for "wake of battle" feedings of civilians in liberated European areas during 1944 and the first five months of 1945. [A long ton is 2,200 pounds.]

The great bulk of the tonnage went to Europe after August, 1944, as the allied advances began opening large areas of Europe, a war department statement said today.

[Earlier in the week, department officials said the army will stop food shipments to civilians in the liberated countries on Sept. 1.]

The statement asserted "minimum quantities of rationed foods have been exported for Europe's civilians. Total of canned meats, sugar, and fats supplied during the period has been approximately 200,000 tons or 11 per cent of the food supplied.

YOU STAND when you hear The Star Spangled Banner . . . and you tingle with excitement.

Well, FRANCIS SCOTT KEY stood, too, when he wrote it in 1814 . . . and he, too, tingled with excitement.

It was during the War of 1812. Washington had fallen. The invading fleet was bombarding Fort McHenry, guardian of Baltimore. If Baltimore succumbed, defeat for the nation became imminent.

So Francis Scott Key, a prisoner of war, stood for long, nerve-wracking hours on the deck of the Minden and watched and waited.

American freedom was the issue. Would our flag still be flying when dawn arrived?

Daylight finally came. The flag was still there. Joyously, Key jotted down his ringing lines on the back of an envelope. A new song of freedom was born!

Today, freedom is again the issue.

It can be settled now, as always, in but one way—final and complete victory.

Buying and holding War Bonds is one vital way to speed the day. So buy your stake in freedom often. Buy more War Bonds today—and keep them!

TELLS HOW REDS HOLD ROMANIA IN TERROR RULE

Propaganda Against U. S. and Britain Cited

BY JAMES SLOAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, July 15—"The real rulers of Romania are a little group of comintern trained Communists who constitute one of the police governments which Prime Minister Churchill condemned in a broadcast as a negation of allied victory," it was charged today by the London Sunday Times.

Archibald Gibson, a correspondent recently back from Romania, accused this Red regime in the ex-axis satellite state of pouring out "anti-American and particularly anti-British propaganda" while blacking out all the real news from Romania except that which suits the Communist dominated government and the Russian occupation forces.

"The news from outside, except over the radio, is similarly restricted," he added. "The voice of what opposition remains has been silenced. No one can leave Romania without Russian permission—which is rarely granted."

60,000 Persons Arrested

Russia is given the most prominent place in Romanian broadcasts, and the radio and press, following the example of the Moscow radio, bitterly attack friends of Britain as Fascists, Gibson continued.

The soviet selected members of the government and the Communists have thrown between 60 and 90 thousand persons into nearly food-less and vermin infested prison dungeons and concentration camps to await trial on flimsy charges, he said, adding that "many have been locked up on the principle that one's a 'Fascist' if one's not a Communist, or on scant evidence in anonymous letters."

Mass arrests by the government of Petru Groza, who was installed on Russian demand, and depredations of the "citizens' committees" formed to bolster the police force, have made the Romanians' life so insecure that few of them will open their doors until a caller identifies himself, said the correspondent.

Demand Free News

Despite the Groza government's promise to reclaim northern Transylvania from the Russians, that area is still largely in the hands of Hungarian Communists, Gibson said, and in the Maramures area the Russians are inspiring propaganda for the district to vote itself into the soviet union, as did Ruthenia.

"Cynical Romanians liken Russia's 'gift' of Transylvania to Russia's 'present' of Vilna to Lithuania before absorbing her in 1940," Gibson reported.

At the same time the Sunday Times editorially demanded that the occupied countries of central Europe be opened to accredited journalists, and suggested that the Big Three should lift the news blackout on the internal situation and political developments in Russian occupied Romania, Hungary, and Bulgaria.

The Sunday Dispatch and the Observer also demanded freedom of the press in eastern Europe and countries in the soviet orbit.

AMERICAN WINS RIGHTS BANNED BY FINN TRUCE

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, July 15—Following long, laborious negotiations with the Russians, the United States political representative in Helsinki, Maxwell M. Hamilton, now has obtained the right to use the diplomatic pouch for his written communications to the state departments and permission to telephone to Sweden. Both are signal privileges, for the Russo-Finnish armistice deprives foreign envoys of these diplomatic advantages.

Nine months of peace find Helsinki more or less unchanged. The food and finance situation, however, is deteriorating rapidly. Potatoes are disappearing from the markets. The average Finn, refusing to pay $2 a pound for potatoes in the black market, eats so-called swades, a kind of turnip used to feed cattle.

British business agents have invaded Finland, trying to capture the available markets before the United States has had time to readapt its industries to peace time demands. The British offer to supply the goods needed by Finland on most generous terms. "Pay whenever you can, no hurry about the money," is their slogan.

HITS SCHOOLS' "PROFITEERING" ON GI STUDENTS

Louisville, Ky., July 15 (AP)—A charge that "the University of Kentucky, as well as every other tax-supported university in the country, is profiteering on war veterans" who are augmenting their schooling under the GI Bill of Rights, was made here today by Arch Stafford, Omaha, Neb., national secretary of the American War Dads.

Stafford, speaking at the organization meeting of the Kentucky State Association of American War Dads, said tax-supported schools thru their representatives "went to Washington and got permission" to charge nonresident fees to the veteran who is going to school with money obtained under the GI bill. This nonresident fee, he said, is assessed even to those veterans who are residents of the state where they are attending school.

Patients may choose from a wide variety of studies.

Skilled artists and craftsmen may apply for entrance into the corps at Chicago Red Cross headquarters. Assistants to the artists also are wanted.

Referring to the "sombre days of the Balkan crisis," the newspaper added that "it is suggested that the Russian hand is behind the odious Balkan plot of hatred and envy against Greek glory. We do not know or believe it."

DAY by DAY on the FARM of BEN MARKLAND

July 15, 1945.

A GAUDY peacock, a pair of fledgling pigeons, and a sour-mugged English bulldog are the reigning stars in the informal pet show on the Wheaton farm.

Farm pets necessarily involve pet trainers, and if any circus managers are looking for prospective lion tamers they might consider Billy Koepp, the tow headed 10 year old son of the farm flockmaster. There are no lions on the farm, but so far this summer Billy has trained a fox terrier, a peacock, and two pigeons.

Eats from His Hand

Billy has taught the peacock to come when called and eat from his hand. He has named the bird "Prince," and his parents are wondering about the advisability of allowing him to continue his training activities. Prince has a definite taste for graham crackers and raisin bread, and if Billy isn't ready with these tidbits when the bird is ready to eat, Prince screams and shrieks at the back door in a raucous and demanding tone. The parents are wondering about the chances of a quiet autumn when Billy goes back to school and won't be on hand to feed Prince.

Billy's pigeon pets are Mike and Ike. He captured them after a risky climb up to the rafters of the cattle barn and is housing them in a small pheasant pen. They also eat oats, corn, and bread from his hand.

Pets Display Jealousy

Two other farm residents can testify, after watching their pet dogs, that humans have no monopoly on the trait of jealousy. They were riding thru the farm fields the other day, accompanied by their two pets, a female German shepherd and a male bulldog.

The shepherd is an old hand at swimming, and always has enjoyed retrieving birds from the farm ponds and streams. The ponderous bulldog, on the other hand, doesn't particularly enjoy swimming and usually avoids water.

During the woodlot ride Tommy, the bulldog, started to cross a canal which connects two farm ponds. Finding himself over his depth, he was forced to swim the canal, but was reluctant to enter the water for the return trip.

After much coaxing, Tommy managed to paddle back across the canal, and was enthusiastically acclaimed by his proud owner.

Lotte Shows Up Tommy

Lotte, the shepherd, felt an attack of Green Dragonitis on seeing Tommy petted for his swimming feat. Without a command she lazily swam the round trip across the canal, then walked to her master for her share of the applause.

★The GARDEN★

MANY novice gardeners still are confused about the two common insects attacking tomato plants this season. These are the flea beetle and aphids [plant lice].

Flea beetles are black, hard-shelled insects about the size of a pinhead. They are chewing insects, and eat many tiny holes in the leaves of tomato and eggplants. They can be controled with rotenone powder or with arsenate of lead mixed at the rate of a tablespoonful to a gallon of water.

Aphids are tiny, soft-bodied insects which feed in clusters on the undersides and stems of tomato and other plants. They suck plant juices, causing the leaves to curl and wither. Nicotine sulphate is the recommended insecticide against plant lice, and sprays containing both rotenone and pyrethrum also are effective. In spraying against aphids, it is important to spray upward from the ground, covering the undersides of the leaves.

Upon his return, the governor will be faced with the task of studying and acting upon more than half of the 738 bills passed by the legislature.

ELEVATOR FALLS FIVE FLOORS IN HAMILTON HOTEL

Guests in the 16 story Hamilton hotel, 20 S. Dearborn st., had to climb stairs yesterday when police halted operation of the hotel's three passenger elevators after one of the elevators dropped from the sixth to the mezzanine floor while filled with members of the Chicago Photo Engravers' union.

Lt. Thomas Donnelly of the Central police district ordered the management to cease operating the elevators. He said they did not have certificates of safety inspection from the city building department.

George Woods, 16, of 1532 S. Racine av., the operator, said the elevator fell when about 20 men crowded into it after a union meeting. Four were treated in St. Luke's hospital for shock: Albert Lorenz, 39, of 5213 Milwaukee av.; Lewis Winkler, 52, of 10055 Lafayette av.; Jack Chernoff, 37, of 4853 N. Harding av., and Walter Elsner, 51, of 3638 N. Claremont av.

KENOSHA WIFE AND BABY DIE IN CHILDBIRTH

Kenosha, Wis., July 15 [Special]—Mrs. Adele Zerk, 25, wife of Oscar U. Zerk, 66, millionaire Kenosha inventor, died here today a few hours after the birth of a son, who also died.

Mrs. Adele Zerk

Mrs. Zerk, formerly an aircraft plant worker at Caldwell, N. J., and the inventor were married April 26, 1944, after a romance that grew out of correspondence between them. Mrs. Zerk, whose maiden name was Zirk, had written to the Kenoshan to ask whether he was any relation to her.

Zerk replied by saying he was no relation but would like a photograph of her. They exchanged pictures and more letters and finally Zerk went to New Jersey and asked for her hand from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Zirk, who lived on a pansy farm. They consented.

TROOPER KILLED IN SUSPECT'S FREEDOM DASH

Phillipsburg, N. J., July 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Corp. Jay Zeiss of the New Jersey state police said a state trooper died early today in Warren hospital a few hours after he was shot by a fugitive who escaped from police custody by swimming the flood swollen Delaware river seven miles north of here.

The trooper was identified as Sgt. Cornelius O'Donnell, in command of the state police barracks at Washington, N. J. Zeiss said the shooting occurred last night shortly after the fugitive surrendered to police for questioning in connection with the ax slaying of his wife in Orange.

Trooper Frank Perry also was shot by the fugitive, Zeiss reported.

New Jersey and Pennsylvania police have closed in on a wooded area at Martin's creek, situated on the Pennsylvania side of the river, where the fugitive scrambled up the bank after swimming thru a swift current.

Police said they believed the fugitive, Ernest Rittenhouse, 30, war plant worker of Orange, was hiding in the area.

Rittenhouse's wife was killed last night at Orange, N. J. Police said she was struck several times with an ax during a quarrel with her husband.

Yachting Set's All Agog Over Mackinac Race

BY JUDITH CASS

THE high point of the summer for yachting enthusiasts will be reached next week-end with the 38th annual race from Chicago to Mackinac Island, Mich. The contestants will start from the downtown harbor of the Chicago Yacht club. Wives and friends of many of the crew members will be on hand to greet them at the finish line at Mackinac.

Harold D. Ashton, chairman of the Chicago Yacht club's race committee, and Jack Courtwright, a committee member, their wives, and Robert [Jack] Ritchie Jr., a former committee member, will arrive at the island on the steamer, North American, next Sunday afternoon. Already at the island will be the Clare Udells, Mrs. Udell's sister, Miss Ruby Shaw; Miss Dorothy Cotton, Miss Virginia Willis and Frank Heyes, who will make the trip north earlier. Mr. Udell's 52 foot Q boat, Falcon II., will defend the Mackinac race in the Universal division, but without its owner aboard, as three other yachtsmen have chartered the boat for the summer.

Mrs. Philo H. Danly, wife of the club's commodore, and Mrs. Robert Benedict Jr., whose husband will be a member of Commodore Danly's crew on the Trident, will be other members of the welcoming committee at Mackinac. Mrs. Benedict's daughter, Mrs. Robert Davies, also is going north. The yawl Southern Cross, formerly owned by Mr. Benedict, will be entered in the race by its new owner, Hugh Schadellee of Grand Rapids, Mich., under its new name, Hilaria. Dr. William A. Thomas, who formerly sailed in the Southern Cross, will be a crew member of Vice Commodore George Sollitt's 60 foot cutter, White Cloud.

Mrs. Sollitt, Mrs. Clyde Larish, Mrs. Dan Strassheim, whose husband will crew on the White Cloud; Mrs. L. L. Karas, whose husband will skipper his Q boat, Cara Mia; Mrs. Victor Milliken, Mrs. Russell Moon, and Mrs. Herman T. Van Mell are others who will make the trip to Mackinac. Mr. Milliken, judge advocate of both the Chicago Yacht club and the Lake Michigan Yachting association, will sail on Falcon II., and Mr. Moon will be a member of Fred Wacker's crew on Tahuna. Mr. Larish owns Wind Song, another cruising contender.

THE QUESTION

Do you think there should be a tax on bachelors?

WHERE ASKED

Pittsfield building.

THE ANSWERS

Lucille Moore, teacher, Fort Pierce, Fla.—In this country it isn't called a bachelor's tax. In reality, however, a bachelor pays more taxes than a married man unless, of course, the bachelor has dependents. I wouldn't be in favor of levying an additional tax on a man just because he's a bachelor. That hardly seems fair to me.

Bette Brown, typist, Elkhart, Ind.—Certainly not. A man has the choice of being married or not being married. If he chooses to be married he should accept the responsibility. It shouldn't fall on the shoulders of a man who decides to stay single and support himself only. Anything more would be unfair.

Barbara Koontz, chemical technician, Elkhart, Ind.—The family is the backbone of a nation. When families and the home fall apart a nation degenerates. Therefore, I think there should be a bachelor's tax. If a man has no family he should contribute to the general welfare of the nation anyway.

Mrs. Martha Hall, secretary, 1319 W. 97th st.—I can't see any more reason why men should be taxed than women who choose to remain single. That's the way it is now, tho it's not called a bachelor tax. A single person who has no dependents hasn't as many tax deductions and is paying a tax because he, or she, is single.

Mrs. Paul Roelants, teletype operator, 5123 Kimbark av.—They shouldn't be taxed just because they are bachelors. They are paying a tax now, but they have the choice of getting married and acquiring additional deductions. A man who has a family needs more money than some one with no responsibilities.

Crowd Thrills to Saddle Feats of 300 Riders

BY NANNETTE McCARTHY

The title of the junior Mrs. Louis F. Swift's horse show, "Galloping Hills," never was more appropriate than yesterday, when more than 300 entries, the largest ever, competed in the fifth annual event at the Swifts' Galloping Hills farm in Wheaton. The show was a gala all day affair.

Spectators gathered early to obtain choice spaces at the ring, which was marked at each post by tiny American flags. Flags also marked the jumps in the two hunters' events. The first of these, the handy hunter class, was won by Mrs. Dennis Murphy, who was awarded the John C. Murphy Murdock trophy. Another memorial trophy, that of Sonny Ripley, was won for the second time by Mrs. Swift, the hostess.

Taking the blue ribbon in the costume parade, which was judged by the applause of the audience, was Paul Butler Jr., wearing a great raccoon coat, carrying a monkey, and trailing Mrs. Swift's white coat. Second prize was won by young Judy and Susie Coffin, representing Little Black Sambo and the Tiger, complete with an umbrella. Six year old Judy Coffin also won the trophy awarded in the junior horsemanship class for riders under 10 years old.

During the hour's adjournment for luncheon, the majority of the spectators partook of a picnic lunch and barbecued chicken.

Watching the show from the sidelines was Mrs. Swift's mother, Mrs. Samuel Chase, who came over from Lake Forest with Mrs. Carter Harrison Jr. Miss June Carry, with her poodle, Casino; Miss Barbara Gould, Miss Jean Carney, and Miss Joan Templeton were a foursome of young spectators. Among the many other horse show enthusiasts were Miss Nancy Lourie, sitting high on the back of a convertible; Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Butler, Mrs. Edwin R. Moore, Miss Cecilia Van Epps, Mr. and Mrs. Edgerton Throckmorton, and Mrs. Theodore Mohlman, whose husband rode in the show.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

More After-the-War Wants

That the white collar girls are incurably domestic is indicated by the considerable number who put in a bid for a home and home furnishings when answering our query, "What are you looking forward most to buying when the war is over?" Washing machines and refrigerators are right up in front along with the prime favorite—nylons.

A combination WCG and housewife mentions [after nylons, of course] her desire for a washing machine and "Tapioca—my favorite dessert." Another house-minded WCG asks for [1] an electric mixer, [2] a small vacuum cleaner for the stairs, and [3] an electric stove. One reader requests "A home and all the equipment to set up housekeeping, furniture, electric appliances, cooking gadgets, dishes, bed linen, etc." Several ask for bedroom furniture, a number want FM radios and record changer combinations. A portable sewing machine, a steam iron, and an electric toaster, appear on the "after-the-war" list with one young woman longing for a pressure cooker "to be able to prepare dinner hurriedly and not have to wait until 8:30 to eat after a strenuous day at the office."

The need for an alarm clock comes first with another home-making WCG; bed sheets and bath towels are her second and third choices. A lawn mower, a bowl-sink combination unit for the kitchen, and even a spinet piano are included in the answers to this survey.

One reader not only knows what she wants to buy after the war but she knows what she intends to do with it: An old farmhouse to fix over into a home for two war orphans she expects to adopt.

That Cruelest Boss

May I nominate for the Cruelest Boss Hall of Fame the one who:

1. Did nothing about dictation for a solid week despite a warning of approaching secretarial vacation.
2. Spent the last pre-vacation day trying to get it all in his secretary's notebook which, in turn, necessitated her coming down for a half day during the official vacation.
3. Would not avail himself of opportunity to use relief stenographic help during his secretary's absence.
4. Greeted her on the first morning back with the remark that the vacation of one week was TOO long.

ANIGMA

On the Memo Pad

Summer time and the war man power commission is asking for women over 18 to detassle corn in Illinois. The farmers provide room and transportation; the workers pay for their food. Andover 3600, ext. 380, is the number to call. Pay is 50 cents an hour. . . . The Chicago public library reminds us that a horticulturist is ready to help all white collar girl gardeners—even the plant-on-the-sill variety, and you can find him in the Randolph st. corridor of the main library. . . . Don't forget, please don't forget, how dire is the need for cakes and cookies at the service men's centers.

Engagements

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brumlik of N. Kilpatrick av. announce the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy, to Pvt. Jack M. Deli of the army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Deli of N. Drake av. Pvt. Deli, a member of the Blackhawk division, has returned from Europe on a 30 day furlough.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Mrs. Mildred S. Daum of the James hotel, Miami Beach, Fla., formerly of Hyde Park blvd., to Irving Perman of New York and Miami Beach.

Woman's Protectorate Board to Meet in Camp

Board members of the Protestant Woman's protectorate will gather today at the Berger Methodist camp, 147th st. and Greenwood av., Dolton, for their final meeting of the season. Mrs. Fred W. Waterman, Mrs. C. A. Bloomquist, and Mrs. William Soldan will entertain the group in their summer cottages on the camp grounds. Mrs. Waterman is president of the protectorate.

GI Joe Reads a Lot, but Not About the War

BY KATHRYN LORING

Service men have become voracious readers, but they don't want to read about the war. At least this is the conclusion that can be drawn if reading habits of the thousands of uniformed men who frequent the Chicago public library may be taken as a criterion.

The library's circulation department is issuing cards to around 30 service men each day, and uniformed visitors to the reference department average 2,000 each month. This, in addition to the numerous men who take advantage of the educational guidance service offered veterans in a newly created department on the library's fourth floor.

The reading is varied and ranges from such subjects as philosophy and history to humor and light fiction, according to Miss Mildred Bruder of the library's public relations department.

Countless calls for house plans, and articles on interior decoration and landscaping indicate an eager anticipation of civilian status. Then, too, the men are skipping nothing in the way of technical articles concerning businesses or professions they might enter after being mustered out of service.

There also are those preparing for a longer military career who ask for foreign dictionaries and grammars—particularly Russian and Japanese—and for information on the history and geography of foreign areas. And incidentally, articles on how to prepare themselves for higher military ratings.

The library continues to receive daily requests from men overseas for good literature of all kinds. Contrary to the popular belief, however, condensed literature and paper back books are definitely on GI Joe's taboo lists. He wants books with good bindings and with illustrations.

Even the Robins Help Out as Leinsdorf Ends Guest Ravinia Week with Chicago Symphony

FEW places in the concert world can hope to rival Ravinia when it comes to playing Beethoven's "Pastoral" of a Sunday afternoon. Not only does the audience relax in bosky surroundings with cool [euphemistic yesterday for downright cold] breezes rippling the dappled shadows on the emerald grass, but those Ravinia trees hold a tribe of eloquent robins who persist in augmenting the Chicago Symphony orchestra until each summer I expect to discover that Mr. Petrillo has organized the American Federation of Robin Redbreasts, local No. 1.

Concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, conductor. Presented at Ravinia Sunday afternoon, July 15, 1945. The program:
Symphony No. 6, F major, "Pastoral" ..... Beethoven
Memorial to Lidice ..... Martinu
Tone Poem, "En Saga" ..... Sibelius
A Symphonic Picture, "Porgy and Bess" ..... Gershwin
[Arranged by Robert Russell Bennett]

Yesterday these warblers gave Erich Leinsdorf beguiling assistance, and no doubt a pleasant shock of surprise, for they are a source of never quite anticipated delight even to Ravinia's oldest customers.

Their melodious murmurs gave a special grace to a clean and fresh "Pastoral" with its intertwining tendrils of melody shining in a gentle sun, its village festival a little like remembered gaiety—almost a Saroyan evocation of carousel and distant rustic band—its banshee winds howling in the sudden storm, and at the end a giant, quite possibly Beethoven himself, stretching great arms as he walked thru the tingling freshness of the rain washed countryside to the dulcet sound of the shepherd's song of thanksgiving. It was not so much a great painting of the "Pastoral" as a fastidious etching, and it seemed to me singularly enjoyable in Ravinia's temperamental acoustics.

Altogether, I found Mr. Leinsdorf's week increasingly interesting as it progressed, not only for his cleancut way with our orchestra, but for his choice of music. Yesterday after the "Pastoral" he went afield in three contrasting directions, all interesting. He introduced Bohuslav Martinu's "Memorial to Lidice," a somber and powerful requiem to the little Czech village too many of whose mawkish mourners have torn vicarious grief to maudlin tatters. Martinu knows the richness of reticence, the dignity of grief. His memorial opens in a crash of deep brass, the winds lift a chorale of mourning, the strings carry a dark litany to crescendo, the brass recurs on the brink of silence. It is a beautiful score by a craftsman, and it was beautifully played.

Sibelius' "En Saga," unaccountably neglected hereabouts, was a field day for the strings, notably the solo viola and the assisting violins, and the winds that sing its recurrent melody. There was a luckless bleat or two, but on the whole it was Sibelius that created a wild Nordic beauty brushed with old wives' tales, as if legend had come suddenly and passionately to life.

For aftermath, there was something you might not have thought Mr. Leinsdorf had in him, a brilliant performance of the Bennett arrangement of Gershwin melodies from "Porgy and Bess," enriched by the sweet-throated saxophone and the spunky banjo. This was first-rate Gershwin, completely relaxed, alive with rhythm, in the groove. And it wasn't played with an indulgent smile as if conductor and orchestra thought themselves slumming. What they did with "Summertime" and "Bess, You Is My Woman Now" was its own reward.

Two Soloists Take Spotlight at Park Concert

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG

Two soloists who came thru the screening process of an audition were the chief points of interest at last night's concert of the Grant Park Symphony orchestra, the orchestra itself, under Nicolai Malko, rather too modestly concealing its abilities in pieces too slight and too short to make much of a stir.

One of the paradoxical features of concert giving is that it is much more difficult for two soloists to assume the main burden of a program than it is for one. Had Lydia Smutny, for instance, the pianist of the occasion, been allowed the time to play MacDowell's D minor concerto in its entirety, instead of only two movements, the program might have had a point of ballast it otherwise conspicuously lacked.

Not that Miss Smutny's performance was not to the good as far as it went. She is an exuberant young woman who smiles while she works, and she plays piano as if it were more fun than anything else in the world. Her fingers are crisp and clean and she keeps them in line by a series of sharp accents that admits of no doubt as to the salient features of the rhythmic pattern. But even with this usually reliable insurance of good ensemble, the concerto now and again took on the aspect of a race, with soloist and orchestra each trying to get there first.

The audience liked Miss Smutny's breezy performance and her encores displayed her skill in modern style—a "Polichinelle" by Villa-Lobos, and a Bagatelle by Tcherepnine.

Julia La Rhea, Negro dramatic soprano, was the other soloist. The inordinately difficult "Casta diva" aria from "Norma" was not the wisest choice of a vehicle, yet except when the strain of a particularly difficult phrase pulled the voice out of focus, it was singing of admirable smoothness and taste, especially in the legato passages, which revealed to the full the exceptional beauty of a richly colored voice. She too sang encores, including two fine spirituals.

After repeating Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra" overture from an earlier program, Mr. Malko led the orchestra in discreet performances of Sibelius' "Swan of Tuonela"—with the English horn solo sensitively phrased by June Panduro—the prelude to Moussorgsky's "Khovanstchina," and ending with the evening's only touch of boisterousness, Tschaikowsky's "1812" overture.

OPA to Ban Charging of Higher Prices for Shorter Fur Coats

Washington, D. C., July 15 (AP)—The OPA decreed today that fur coat manufacturers can't charge higher prices for shorter coats. "Fur coats now are specifically defined to mean all fur garments 28 inches long or longer," OPA said in announcing regulation changes, "so that manufacturers cannot circumvent their highest line price limitations."

'The Wicked Mrs. Steel'

INSTALMENT XXV

MUST ELIMINATE DOUBT

Ralph bit back an instinctive denial. Every fiber of his being was clamoring to protect her. "I swear, Gillian, I don't care whether you did or not. I love you just the same."

"Not just the same, dear. A doubt like that—it's the kind of thing that grows. A year ahead, Ralph—two years—five years. You'll begin to say: 'I wonder whether she did really drop those tablets in the milk without realizing what she was doing?' I would be thinking the same myself. And then we'd both remember that I had bribed Agnes to keep quiet. And so 'the wedge' would be between us all our lives. I'd much rather have all this horrible business with the police now and get it over."

"Anyhow, darling, it's done, and we have to face it together!" he jerked out. "Agnes probably is talking to the police by now."

Agnes at that moment was in Valerie's flatlet, her way out of it barred by Valerie, who was pressing her shoulders against the door.

"You aren't listening to me. And you shall listen before you go!" hissed Valerie.

"I have listened, and it doesn't make any difference." Agnes was coldly determined to exact vengeance for the disappointment that had come near to unhinging her reason.

"You're counting on me to give you the money if you can blot out Gillian. I tell you, you won't blot her out—she'll prove she's innocent. And if she doesn't, I swear on my soul I won't give you a penny."

"You said much the same 10 minutes ago. You all think I'm a fool as well as plain, and that any of you can talk 'poor Agnes' into anything. You got me up here by a trick, pretending you wanted to help me draw up a statement. If you don't come away from that door and unlock it, fool tho I am, I shall use the telephone."

Valerie unlocked the door.

Agnes walked out of the flat to the police station, where she gave her information.

At the family conference, the crushing disappointment had given way to panic, and in panic it had seemed providential that suspicion had fallen upon Gillian. Doubt had followed, then fear of the terrible thoroness of the police.

Valerie had understood Margaret Steel better than any of the others because she had never felt the fascination, had seen her only as a dangerous bully. In the mood of exaltation it had seemed no doubt wrong, but rather boldly and magnificently wrong, to "strike the adder from her path."

In her turmoil she did not hear until Charles Ludlow had knocked a second time. She kept him waiting while she plunged her face in cold water and hastily dabbed on some make-up.

"Hullo, darling!" In the act of kissing her he stopped. "Good heavens, you have made a mess of your face! You don't need rouge, but if you must—here, let me put it right."

She let him.

"I say, is it true that Mrs. Steel is dead?"

"Yes."

"I suppose that means I shan't get my fee for painting Gillian. O, well, I very rarely do collect, and I don't mind painting her for nothing. She's——"

"She'll pay you, Charles."

"She's a good subject, and a good model. I might do something with her head. Who gets the old girl's money?"

"Gillian."

"Splendid! Do you get enough for us to marry right away?"

"I don't get anything."

"How darned rotten! I say, that's a bit of a knock for me!" His disappointment was childish in its honesty. "The moment I heard, I thought there'd surely be enough for that furniture you want—tho personally I can't see that furniture as such makes much difference. D'you think you could manage with what we've both more or less got?"

Valerie had not heard the question. She did not make the mistake of believing that, because he had no money sense, he had no wisdom, and she felt the need for his guidance.

"Charles, I thought she was going to leave me everything. She made a will in my favor."

"Forgot to sign it or something, I suppose."

"She made another will later on in Gillian's favor." He seemed unimpressed. "Charles, suppose I had poisoned her before she made the other will, we would have been rich. You could have dropped the bank and done your own work. And you could have designed a house for us to live in together."

He laughed as he filled an abnormally large pipe.

"Bit late to think of that now! And anyway it wouldn't have worked."

"Why not?"

"Because the mentality that could nerve itself to murder for gain is unsuited to domestic life. No murderer, male or female, would be any good as a lover."

"But—but people murder for love."

"Nonsense! That's only what the headlines in the newspaper say, just to catch your eye. I couldn't make love to the most ravishingly beautiful murderess. Not because I'd be afraid she'd stick a knife in me, but because—O, well, that hideous idea packed away in her brain somewhere would show itself. All ideas do show themselves. Why, when I paint——"

"Do you mean that if I had murdered her you would have turned me down?"

"Not at once. I probably wouldn't have known you had done it until we were actually married. I might not have known even then. I would simply have made the discovery that you were hateful. Must you talk about yourself like this?"

She was deeply disturbed by his manner. He was telling her, did he but know it, that already she was tainted and that one day he must become aware of it.

"It was silly of me to talk like that," she apologized. "I expect I'm a bit light headed. After all, one doesn't hear every afternoon that one is not going to inherit a huge fortune."

He pricked up his ears almost literally like an animal scenting danger.

"Did you hear only this afternoon that the will was no good to you?"

"Heavens, I haven't started that kettle yet!" She busied herself with the preparation of the tea.

Every fine afternoon Charles called on Valerie and she gave him one cup of very strong tea and a thin biscuit and then they went rambling together.

Thru the Looking Glass

Drug and Cosmetic Industry, a trade publication for the beauty field, reports an interesting little episode in England that reveals how the status of cosmetics has changed. Not long ago, it says, no less than the lord chief justice of England, Viscount Caldecotte, proclaimed the importance of cosmetic and beauty preparations in an address to a meeting of Police Courts and Prison Gate mission.

Women prisoners in English jails, it seems, are not allowed to use make-up. The feminine prisoner gets a hair brush, a comb, a tooth brush, nail brush, towel, medicated tooth powder, and a bar of plain washing soap. Her lipstick, powder, nail enamel, and rouge apparently are taken away from her. Which should, when you come to think of it, make her degradation complete!

The chief justice took official cognizance of this peculiar and subtle inhumanity to women prisoners, telling his very serious audience that "women are so lost without cosmetics that even in prison they feel a little more disreputable when cosmetics are lacking."

To which we would add a loud "amen." Wouldn't you? To deprive even the most criminal of women of the cosmetic necessities—lipstick, for one, and face powder—seems an unnecessarily cruel violation of the human dignity of the female.

It seems to us that in this little aspect of crime control England has been either very dumb or very bright. In one way, it could be a crime prevention measure!

Clothing in All Sizes Needed, Sally Relates

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

(Sally Joy Brown department activities are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.)

Appeals for clothing seem to be ever present. We can place any size in clean, wearable apparel.

Baby clothing has been requested for an expected child of Mrs. D., who lives on the near north side. The father is out of the home at present, and an agency is lending assistance.

Mrs. L., also from the near north side writes:

"Dear Miss Brown: My husband is somewhere in Germany. With prices as they are, it is most difficult for me to manage on the family allowance and to provide clothing for our baby boy, who is 17 months old, and for myself. I would appreciate it ever so much if you could obtain something for us to wear. I am handy with the needle and could make necessary adjustments. He wears size 2 and shoes, size 7, and I wear size 18 and shoes, 6½."

Mrs. N., whose husband is also in the army, voices her concern not only for clothing for immediate wear but for the fall for her family of four children—girls 15 and 11, and boys 13 and 20 months.

The O. family is composed of four members, parents, girls 14 and 8, living on the south side. The father's employment is sporadic, because of a spinal injury and the mother is unemployable. Clothing in sizes 18 and 8 for the girls, and women's clothing, size 52, will be gladly called for.

Edna J., Chicago—When I find a cork is a little too large to fit a bottle, I cut a tapered slot in the side of cork. In this way I can compress it slightly—and it fits.

Amy F., Peoria, Ill.—I painted some window frames this spring and held a narrow strip of cardboard close to the edge of frame as I painted. In this way I didn't get any paint on the window glass.

Mrs. Fred S., Chicago—It took me some time to learn not to wash spinach or asparagus in hot water. Easier to get sand out of these vegetables if I wash them twice in lukewarm water and then rinse them in cold so they will recapture their crispness.

A recipe for soap is just slightly out of the cooking line, but now that harassed homemakers have a soap shortage to face along with their various food problems, some of them have been asking about making their own soap at home.

Fats which have become too stale to use for cooking purposes can be converted into soap for laundry and household use at home. Homemade soap usually is pale brown in color and too strong to use on delicate fabrics, but works beautifully on the family laundry and for general cleaning purposes.

Unless your need for soap is desperate, I'd recommend turning in those waste fats for points to be used in the purchase of meats and fresh cooking and table fats. But here's how, for those who wish to make soap. Remember to handle lye with extreme care.

How to Make Soap

5 pounds waste fat, melted
1 pound can lye
1 quart cold water
3 teaspoons borax
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup cold water
¼ cup ammonia

Strain fat thru cheesecloth to remove solid particles. Cool to lukewarm. Dissolve the lye in cold water and let stand until cool. Use a crockery container. Then add fat slowly, stirring with wooden spoon. Mix other ingredients together and stir into lye and fat mixture. Stir until thick and light colored. Pour into large shallow pan [dripping pan is good] lined with cheesecloth. Mark into cakes before completely solidified. Break apart when hard and lay out somewhere to dry well before using.

Fat trimmings from meat, chicken fat and bacon drippings may be rendered for cooking use in milk, buttermilk, or sour milk. The milk makes the fat bland enough in flavor to be suitable for cakes and other cooking purposes where flavor is important.

How to Render Fats

Chop fat scraps or run them thru the meat grinder. Add any melted drippings desired. For each 2 pounds of fat [about 4 cups, on the average], use ½ cup milk, sour milk, or buttermilk. Combine in the top of a double boiler and cook over hot water until the fat is all melted. Strain thru several thicknesses of cheesecloth into a can or other utensil and refrigerate, to use as needed.

Deep frying fats which have darkened in color due to overheating, or taken on unappetizing flavor or odor may be clarified by cooking a few slices of potato in the fat. Put the raw potato into the cold fat and heat gradually until the potato browns and fat ceases to bubble. Then strain the fat thru several thicknesses of cheesecloth placed in a strainer.

No cooking fat ever should be heated to the smoking point. A fat which has been allowed to get that hot takes on poor flavor which affects the foods in which it is used, and becomes rancid quickly. Scorched fat may also be irritating to the digestive tract.

Writers to See First Parade of New Fashions

BY REA SEEGER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, July 15 — Big name American designers will parade their fall and winter collections before 150 fashion writers representing the newspapers of the country during press week, which starts tomorrow. This fifth annual show promises lot of excitement. First, because it is the first post-war showing, and, secondly, because of the friendly but serious competition of the Paris dressmakers, if not actually this season, then most certainly in the near future.

Such well-known designers as Trigere, Carnegie, Joseph Halpert, Nettie Rosenstein, Claire McCardell, and a dozen others, will parade their fall and winter creations designed expressly for the American woman. And we who for the last four showings have reported the results are sure that we'll see not only intriguing new ideas but the smartest possible clothes that can be made under the limitations imposed by government regulation.

Despite these limitations, the American women have been the best dressed women in the world, because fashions have been sleek, interesting, and colorful, all made for the American way of living and working. The efforts of the American designers have been magnificent.

During this week, these new fashions will be sketched almost as soon as seen, and together with additional information about new colors, new sleeves, the wandering location of a hip line or waist line, the length or width of skirts, the newest news about handwork, and embellishment such as beading and sequins, will be fashion news.

Telling Tales Before Child Often Unwise

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

The callers had a 4 year old little girl. They talked about her, before her, every minute they were in the house.

"Our" baby is 11 months old. The other day his mother was telling about his newest amusing little stunt, and the little rascal stopped what he was doing, with that look they get later on which seems to say, "All about ME—isn't that interesting!" or "Aren't I smart!"

Haven't you seen a 2 or 3 year old sit enthralled when some one of his family tells things about him, either how "the squirrel ate right out of Davey's hand," or the "cute" thing Davey said or did? There's a certain look they get when it's about "me."

Now, it's perfectly all right when the little tale is what I call impersonally personal, as, for example, the one about the squirrel in the park. It's a wonderful adventure when the little squirrel he's been coaxing for days, suddenly loses his timidity and sits right up before the small boy to take a nut from his hand.

It's a story which could happen to a little boy in a book, but which has a special edge when it happens to you. This kind of narrative doesn't make a child self-conscious or a show-off.

But the story which makes Davey or Susan out as "cute," wonderful, pretty, or even naughty, does something quite different to little children, something which isn't so desirable. There you have a distinction with a difference, as they say.

So when I saw the baby's eyes get that thoughtful little roll, I knew that before many months we'd have to stop telling tales before him about the sweetness or the smartness of his ways. Children are so much lovelier in our eyes, and it is better for them, when they are unself-conscious.

Looking at Hollywood

—By Hedda Hopper—

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 15—Joan Crawford gets Lillian Hellman's "The Searching Wind" under the banner of Hal Wallis, which means the old adage never fails—one picture does it. That one picture being "Mildred Pierce" after Joan's two years' absence from the screen. Wallis is trying to borrow Joe Cotten for it, too. I asked Joan what she was going to do at Metro. She exclaimed, "Metro? I have no deal cooking there. Some one's talking in their sleep." . . . Since Ethel Barrymore will be starred in "Some Must Watch" for Dore Schary at RKO, Alan Marshal, who's entirely recovered his health, will be with her. Also Dorothy McGuire. That's not bad casting. When this is finished in October Ethel goes to New York to do the Philip Barry play, "The Joyous Season," for Arthur Hopkins. Then if Mary Martin can wait until January, she'll direct her in "The Lute." . . . It's not bad news that Darryl Zanuck has also bought the life story of Harry Hopkins, but now rumor has it that Zanuck has also bought Hopkins to go with it. How many jobs can a sick man hold down? I thought the garment workers had him for $25,000 per year.

Think Again, If You're Eyeing Clark Gable

If anybody thinks they're going to grab off Clark Gable as a life partner in a hurry, they've got another think. I went visiting the lovable lug the other day, and how we laughed over all the past, present, and cross-currents! Sure, Clark likes all the girls—why not? He's more attractive than ever. The same old Clark. He was a little stiff when he first got out of the army. He was mentally carrying the uniform around on his shoulders, but that's been put away in moth balls. He's gay, full of beans, and on the job. His job is pictures. He told me one of the things that got him back on the screen was the attitude of fellows in the air corps. They kept saying, "Gee, we miss your pictures!" "Then I realized I could do more in the business I knew than the business of flying, which others do much better," said Clark. When I put my face beside his and said, "How does this profile match?" he yelled to Vic Fleming, "Quick—the camera! Shoot the ham—we're sizzling!" He had a scene to do with Greer Garson. They'd just been married. They drove up in a car to a cheap little house; she got out; he followed with two bags and ran up the stairs after her. When he got to the top he grabbed her for a good, hot hug and when scene was over he said, "Gosh, another two steps and I wouldn't have made it."

There and Here In the Hollywood Film Set

Steve Hannegan's ex-wife, Susie, is in Nassau, and her friends think she'll be Mrs. Tony Duff before autumn leaves fall. . . . Watched Ann Hunter at work in "Cornered." Asked if she was nervous. "No—excited," said she. I hope the Hays office lets you see her in the black dress she was wearing. It was revealing in just the right places. . . . Zasu Pitts received an electric from Brower McIntyre of Detroit [who, incidentally, will be here end of July]. This electric is a closed job made in 1902 and arrived complete with fresh orchid. First thing Zasu's daughter, Ann, did was pick up Mrs. Frank Freeman and take her shopping. Did they stop traffic! . . . Gail Russell's brother, Russ, with a medical discharge after five years in the army, is being tested at Paramount. . . . Ella Rains' parents here to stay. They found a house in Burbank. Charley Feldman signed Ella's sister-in-law, Mella Matthews, who'll study another six months under Florence Enright before beginning her career.

ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S QUIZ

Q. 1—You are South and hold:
♠AJ4 ♥KQ9754 ♦AK ♣K4
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 club	Pass	1 spade	Double
Pass	2 diamonds	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two hearts. Despite the strength of your hand you must not make a jump bid because your partner may have nothing and a contract for nine tricks would not be safe. If partner has anything at all he should give you a chance when you bid that way against two bidding opponents and with a passing partner.

Q. 2—Your partner opens with one heart and you hold:
♠74 ♥QJ7 ♦643 ♣AJ1095
What is your response?

A.—Two hearts. This hand is worth one constructive bid and not two, therefore the more important of the two bids is made. If you should bid two clubs and partner rebids two hearts you could not afford to raise to three.

Q. 3—You are South and hold:
♠74 ♥52 ♦KQ9743 ♣732
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	2 clubs	Pass	Pass
3 clubs	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four diamonds. In view of partner's vigorous bidding you should show some signs of life, particularly in view of your previous pass. Partner will not interpret your bid as showing outside strength since if that were the case you would have bid two diamonds over two clubs.

Q. 4—You are South and hold:
♠J1096 ♥KJ2 ♦QJ5 ♣532
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 heart	Double	Pass	?

What do you bid?

A.—One spade. This is preferable to responding in no trump to show the heart stopper. A four card major holding should rarely be concealed when partner doubles. If partner takes further action the heart stopper may be shown by bidding no trump on the next round.

Q. 5—You are South and hold:
♠753 ♥A107654 ♦Q6 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 club	1 spade	?

What do you do?

A.—Pass. It is too risky to bid two hearts which would force partner to speak again. If partner's rebid should be three clubs you would be very unhappy about the whole thing. If you pass first you may take the liberty of showing the hearts next time, if you feel so inclined.

Q. 6—You are South and hold:
♠74 ♥653 ♦A9754 ♣K96
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
4 hearts	4 no trump	Pass	?

What do you bid?

A.—Six diamonds. Partner's four no trump is a conventional method of forcing you to show your best suit. Since he is assuming responsibility for a contract of five in some suit even tho you may have little or nothing, your surprising holding of an ace and a king should be enough to produce 12 tricks.

Q. 7—You are South [opponents vulnerable, you are not] and you hold:
♠AQ32 ♥AJ54 ♦J107 ♣Q3
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 spade	2 diamonds
Pass	Pass	?.

What do you bid now?

A.—Double. This may seem strange to some readers, without a sure trump trick. You have so many high cards between you and your partner, however, that it is a moral certainty that the dummy will be trickless. Penalizing vulnerable opponents is usually more profitable than trying for games. On the actual hand the contract was set 800 points.

Q. 8—You are South and hold:
♠KQ109765 ♥4 ♦5 ♣KQ104
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	2 diamonds	2 hearts	Pass
2 spades	Pass	3 clubs	Pass
4 clubs	Pass	5 spades	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Six spades. The key to the situation is the singleton diamond. There is no question that partner has the ace of clubs, spades, and hearts. If he didn't he surely couldn't bid three suits and jump beyond game.

NELSON BEATS BYRD, 4 AND 3, TO TAKE P. G. A. CROWN

DON GREENWOOD OF ILLINOIS WILL JOIN ALL-STARS

200 Pound Quarter 4 Year Veteran

All-Star Roster

THE list of college football players who have accepted invitations to join the All-Stars for the game Aug. 30 in Soldiers' field with the Green Bay Packers follows:

ENDS—Jack Dugger, Ohio State; Dub Wooten, Oklahoma.
TACKLES—Glen Burgess, Tulsa; Clyde Flowers, Texas Christian.
GUARD—Pat Filley, Notre Dame.
CENTER—Gordon Appleby, Ohio State.
HALF BACKS—Babe Dimancheff, Purdue; Sgt. Charles Trippi, Georgia; Edmond Shedlosky, Tulsa; Joe Renfroe, Tulane.
QUARTER BACK—Don Greenwood, Illinois.
FULL BACK—Sgt. Ernie Bonelli, Pittsburgh.

BY WILFRID SMITH

Don Greenwood of Illinois, who proved to midwest football fans last year that the quarter back in the T formation can be a ball carrier, has accepted an invitation to play against the Green Bay Packers in Soldiers' field Aug. 30 in the 12th game of the All-Star series sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. Greenwood played two years at Illinois after his two seasons at the University of Missouri.

Don Greenwood

Greenwood enrolled at Missouri after graduation from Southwest high school in Kansas City. He entered the army air corps in July, 1942, and received an honorable discharge 14 months later. Since his home then was in Wilmette, Ill., he went to Illinois and immediately became an important factor in the T formation Coach Ray Eliot taught his players.

Don Handles the Ball

Buddy Young, fleet Negro half back, always will be remembered in connection with Illinois' T formation attack last year but it was Greenwood who handled the ball under center. Moreover, with the style directed by Coach Eliot, Greenwood also became a threat as a ball carrier. In the Notre Dame-Illinois game last fall, with the score 13 to 7 in favor of the Irish, Greenwood broke away for a 72 yard run to the goal for what at least would have tied the game but the play was nullified by an infraction of the rules.

Greenwood says this was his greatest thrill in football, even if he did not score, and the thousands who watched that contest will agree with his selection.

He's a Big Fellow

Greenwood, 24 years of age, weighing 200 pounds and 6 feet tall, will be invaluable to the All-Stars when they face the champions of the National Football league. His experience, of course, is a factor matching his physical powers. Greenwood is a capable defense man and a better than average pass receiver.

Greenwood saw considerable service as a member of the 1944 All-Star team which twice led the Chicago Bears in the game at Dyche stadium but which was defeated, 24 to 21, by a fourth period field goal.

Don was graduated from Illinois with a bachelor of science degree.

As the 1945 All-Star squad takes form—more than 50 players will comprise the squad—it is apparent that the collegians will have talent, power, and speed to make the contest with Green Bay equal to the stirring games which have featured the series.

Call for Musicians

MUSICIANS who wish to join the College All-Star band, which will appear in Soldiers' field the night of the All-Star game, Aug. 30, are asked to communicate with Ray Dvorak, director of bands at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD

IF you have wondered about the continuing popularity of the All-Star football game we have two items which may provide the answer. . . . One is from an army corporal in the Philippines, who recently wrote this department as follows: "I had hoped to be back in the United States in time for this year's All-Star game, but it doesn't look now as if I'll make it. Inclosed is a money order for $19.80. Please pick out the three best seats in Soldiers' field and mail them to my dad in Aurora. I would appreciate it if you would inclose the following note with the tickets: 'Dear Dad—Take Mom and Paul to the All-Star game, will you? Have a good time and give the All-Stars a couple of extra cheers for me.'" . . . The soldier's father, a Protestant minister by the way, will get three seats on the 50 yard line. . . . The same mail brought a letter from a widely known college player who is now in the army. . . . He wrote: "I have just been notified by my commanding officer that I have permission to play with the All-Stars against Green Bay. He said he understood I would have to finance my own expenses to Chicago. I'm perfectly willing to pay for the privilege of participating in the game, but I wish you'd give me an estimate of my expenses, so I can save up enough money for the trip." . . . He was promptly notified that all expenses would be assumed by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., sponsor of the contest. . . . With that kind of interest, both from a competitor and a spectator, how could the All-Star game fail to succeed? . . .

Jimmy Crowley, commissioner of the All-America Football conference, recently wrote club owners as follows: "We have rented offices for our headquarters on the 77th floor of the Empire State building, which proves we are going places." . . . The quarters will not be available until Aug. 15. . . . Every time a tenpin is cracked in Don Hutson's bowling emporium in Green Bay it's good news to Curly Lambeau, coach of the world champion Packers and Don's boss. . . . Curly uses the wounded wood in his fireplace. . . . Charles H. Graham, president of the San Francisco Seals, is serving his 28th year with the same club. . . . Lt. Larry Oliphant, former Northwestern football and baseball star, is air combat intelligence officer with a carrier based torpedo squadron that recently took part in attacks on Japan. . . . Lt. Clair Voss of the marines, former Marquette half back, who has been recuperating at his home in Evanston from injuries incurred on Iwo Jima, is anxious to get back to the front. . . . "This ration book system is too much for me," he explains.

The Price We Pay

High is the price we pay in lives of youth
To make secure our hold on right and truth;
Precious each privilege and custom known
That from familiar walks have claimed our own.
Each loyal lad now numbered with the dead,
By the donning of a uniform has said:
"This plot of life these hands of mine have tilled,
The future, bright with hopes still unfulfilled,
Are mine no more. Freely I yield them all
In answer to our country's urgent call."
For them, within each heart a cross we raise
Of gratitude more eloquent than praise,
Around which tender memories entwine
To keep forever green this hallowed shrine.

TOLEDO GOLFER, 3 DOWN AT 21, RALLIES TO WIN

Ninth Straight in Tourney Play

BY CHARLES BARTLETT
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Dayton, O., July 15—John Byron Nelson, the greatest pitcher modern golf ever has looked upon, today struck out Samuel Dewey Byrd, 4 and 3, over the Moraine Country club course to win his second national professional championship.

Nelson, who was playing in his fifth P. G. A. final since 1939, finally accomplished what he failed to do in his 1939, 1941, and 1944 roles as runner-up. He had to throw all the curves in his repertoire to win the championship today. It looked for a spell as tho the man who has now won his last nine individual tournament appearances in succession was going to be beaten again as he was by Henry Picard at Pomonok on the 37th, by Vic Ghezzi in Denver on the 38th, and by Bob Hamilton in Spokane on the 36th. Only once before had Byron been able to win this crown, and that in 1940, when he triumphed over Sam Snead with three of the finest finishing irons he ever struck.

Byrd Leads, 2 Up, at 18

Byrd, smashing out a home run streak of 67, five under par in the morning, wound up the first 18 with a two up advantage over Nelson. Nelson had a rather worried 69, and the 58 mile an hour gale which spanked the course this afternoon did not help him.

Came Nelson then into the afternoon round. He fretted about the gusts which made his and Byrd's shirts and slacks billow out like spinnakers as they stood up to their shots. Byron blew a four footer on the 21st, third of the afternoon round, while Sam was knocking one in from half that distance for the birdie which sent him 3 up.

Byrd Outdistances Nelson

The 38 year old Byrd, who majored in baseball with the New York Yankee outfield before he sought a golfing degree, was playing in his third P. G. A. tourney. Sam was throwing strikes all day, his capacity for smashing drives even outdistancing Nelson, no bunter himself. Then Sam found himself up against the most superb pressure artist in this game.

Byron chose the 22d to win a hole, dropping the ball 10 feet from the cup at that snugly set problem of 525 yards. He did it with a brassie, the club which, he said tonight, won the championship for him. Then there was the 25th, where Byrd, by his own admission, really lost the match. Sam's second shot to this 330 yard assignment turned up on the right edge of the green. His approach from there was weak, stopping four feet from the hole, and he missed the putt to leave himself only 1 up.

[Associated Press Wirephoto]
Ed Dudley, president of P. G. A., presents Byron Nelson, right, with cup after the Toledo entrant won the event in Dayton, O., yesterday by defeating Sam Byrd, 4 and 3, in the 36 hole final round.

Nelson Squares Match on 26th

The 26th, longest hole on the course off its 589 yards, saw Byrd going for a six, no thanks to a trapped second and a three-putt green. Nelson went for three strokes on that carpet himself but still won the hole and squared the match.

Nelson then touched off his best putt of the day on his admission, a 25 footer on the 386 yard 29th. From

TALBERT, HART WIN WESTERN TENNIS CROWNS

Neenah, Wis., July 15 [Special]—Billy Talbert of Wilmington, Del., and Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., today won the 1945 Western Senior men's and women's singles crowns. Talbert defeated Elwood Cooke of Boston, 6-2, 6-8, 7-5, for the men's title, while Miss Hart scored a straight set triumph over Miss Mary Arnold, Los Angeles, 6-3, 8-6.

Rallies to Triumph

Talbert, ranked second nationally and newly crowned National Clay Courts champion, rallied in the final set to gain his victory over Cooke, formerly ranked nationally and recently discharged from the navy.

Miss Hart, who had upset Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke yesterday, followed thru in the finals against Miss Arnold, second seeded in the meet. The former national girls' champion had little difficulty winning the first set, but was extended in the second.

Mrs. Cooke and Miss Hart teamed to win the women's doubles, defeating Miss Arnold and Mrs. Eleanor Cushingham of Hollywood, Cal., 6-2, 6-3.

Injury Bothers Elwood

Talbert teamed with Cooke to win the men's doubles, defeating Jim Livingstone, Beverly Hills, Cal., and Harley Buttimer, San Francisco, 6-4, 6-4. The Wilmington star won his third crown, the mixed doubles titles, when he and Miss Hart won by default from Mr. and Mrs. Cooke after winning the first set, 6-4, and holding a 2-0 lead in the second. The default came when Elwood withdrew because of a foot ailment.

Only 6 of 40 Yachts Defy Huron Gale

Port Huron, Mich., July 15 (AP)—At least six out of 40 racing sail boats which battled a heavy northeast gale were reported today racing toward Mackinac Island after the storm had grounded one craft and forced 30 to port. Three of the yachts which started the race from Port Huron yesterday were unreported.

The coast guard reported distress flares from an unidentified yacht were sighted and that another boat had lost its mast.

Yachts Limp Into Port

Twenty-two of the sail boats limped into port here, six sought refuge at Harbor Beach, one at St. Clair, and one returned to Detroit.

[Hostess II., a 50 foot yawl owned by Kenneth Stanford, of the Chicago Yacht club, put in at Harbor Beach, but later reëntered the race.]

Many of the yachts, which fought the 25 mile an hour wind and seas which rose as high as 20 feet, returned to port with sails and rigging missing. Several yachtsmen were treated at a first aid station established by police and volunteers, and one, Miss Marion Cook of Detroit, member of the crew of the Melody, was removed to a hospital with head injuries.

Howard Boston of Mount Clemens, Mich., suffered an eye injury when he was struck by a cable after the Heather lost both its sails.

Another crewman, Paul Prathin of Detroit, washed overboard by a heavy wave, grabbed a shroud line as he plunged into the water and pulled himself back on the yacht. The boat had lost its jib sheets.

The three yachts still unreported were the Manitou, Symphony, and Stormy Petrel, all of Detroit.

The Blitzen Leads in Race

The coast guard at Thunder Bay reported at 6:30 p. m. [E. W. T.] that the Blitzen, a 64 foot cutter, had completed two-thirds of the 243 mile course and was leading those craft still in the race.

Other craft reported by the coast guard still in the race, but trailing Blitzen by more than 12 miles included the Apache of Detroit, Last Straw of Detroit, Jack of Saginaw, Armida of Detroit, and Ramble of Detroit.

E. W. Kiefer, chairman of judges for the race, said the Vitesse II., skippered by Clotus Welling of Detroit, went aground south of Harbor Beach. The crew reached shore safely.

RAIN HALTS SOX AND A'S; PLAY 2 GAMES TODAY

BY IRVING VAUGHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Philadelphia, Pa., July 15—The fifth place White Sox actually scored a couple of runs this afternoon but their amazing work went for naught. The runs, as well as the base hits involved, were washed away when what was supposed to be a double header with the tail end Athletics was cut to two and a fraction innings by rainfall. When the umpires called off the party in the home half of the third inning the Chicagoans were ahead, 2 to 1, but at the moment of cancellation Bill Dietrich was in bad shape.

As two runs are unusual in the life of the Sox they will be accounted for without delay. They were put together in the first inning against none other than the capable Russ Christopher. Wally Moses and Le Roy Schalk singled and Kerby Ferrell was safe on George Kell's bad throw of a bunt. One of the runs got home on a single by Tony Cuccinello after John Dickshot had fanned, and the other scored on Oris Hockett's fly.

Play Two Games Today.

Christopher had walked with none out and scored on a single by Hal Peck with one out in the third when the rain stepped up its tempo and induced the umpires to act. With this much pitching under Dietrich's belt Boss James Dykes decided he couldn't send back the recent invalid for part of the twilight-electric light double header which was quickly arranged for tomorrow. It will be Orval Grove and Johnny Humphries, but Christopher will bounce back for the A's, assisted by the enterprising Buck Newsom.

Incidentally, Newsom who lost 12 straight up to a few days ago when he slapped a shutout on the Browns, now has a new glove and a slick knuckle ball. If the knuckler is any good at all it is going to be too bad for the Dykes' itinerants. They have lost their last six with Washington, mainly because of the butterfly pitch.

It All Depends on Weather

According to the schedule the Sox play here Tuesday and open in Boston Wednesday but because of the new no-Pullman berths ruling for short trips, nothing is definite. If the twilight-night double header is played here tomorrow the Tuesday activity will be called off, giving the Sox space for a daylight ride to Boston. If rain intervenes again tomorrow the twilight-night thing will be put on here Tuesday in which event Boston will cancel its Wednesday opener to provide travel time for the Sox.

HY VANDENBERG WINS, 5-3; WYSE TRIUMPHS, 7-2

43,803 Watch Club Gain on 3 Rivals

BY EDWARD BURNS

Fine pitching by Hy Vandenberg and Hank Wyse and sound whacking of the baseball by their Cub associates right down the line, enabled Chicago to sweep a double header yesterday before 43,803 paying guests in Wrigley field, 5 to 3 and 7 to 2. The Cubs gained two games on the three other teams that were in the first division at the time the day's festivities began.

This morning the Cubs are four games ahead of the second place Cardinals, four and a half ahead of the Dodgers, and seven ahead of the new fourth placers, the Pirates. The Giants, who earlier in the season led the Cubs by 11½ games, plunked back into fifth place, eight games behind the Cubs.

The second victory gave the Cubs 15 successes in their last 16 starts. The Giants, who beat the Cubs four straight in the first series of the year between the clubs and subsequently led them, six victories to one, now have lost four of their last five engagements with the Chicagoans.

Six Straight for Wyse

Vandenberg held the Giants to three hits in the first game, one an infield scratch in the fourth inning and the other two in the ninth, including a safe bunt after two were out. It was his fourth success of the year. Hank Wyse, winningest Cub pitcher, went all the way, as usual, for victory in the second game. It was his twelfth of the year, and his sixth straight.

In his handsome performance, Vandenberg retired the Giants in order in all but the fourth and ninth innings. Errors by the usually reliable Don Johnson on two double play chances enabled the Giants to take a 3 to 1 lead in the first of the fourth inning but the league leaders came right back in their half to score four runs to effect the final 5 to 3 score. The winning margin was produced by Johnson on a double with the bases full and two out.

A Cub run produced in the first inning of the first game on a double by Stan Hack and a single by Andy Pafko stood up as a large lead while Vandenberg retired the first nine batsmen who faced him.

Cub Errors Help Giants

The Giants' fourth seemed rather distressing to Cub partisans, perhaps, until the home half of the inning cured everything. Leon Treadway opened the fourth by beating out a slow roller to Johnson. George Hausmann sent a double play ball to Len Merullo but Johnson fumbled Len's toss and both runners were safe.

Whitey Lockman sacrificed and Vandenberg's effort to force the speedy Treadway at third was late.

The bases were loaded and Phil Weintraub shot a carom off Phil Cavarretta's glove. Johnson retrieved the ball nicely and threw to Vandenberg as he slid into first to take the ball as he fell. This maneuver retired Weintraub but it sent Treadway home with the tying run.

Ernie Lombardi was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Danny Gardella bounced a double play ball to Johnson, but Don again tried to throw the ball before he had it, and fumbled. This enabled Hausmann to score and the bases remained loaded. The runners held their bases while Johnny Kerr flied to Andy Pafko but Nap Reyes was hit by a pitched ball, forcing Lockman across the plate. Rube Fischer forced Gardella at third.

Johnson Makes Amends

And here's the way the Chicago end of the inning traspired: Cavaretta singled to center. After Pafko had fanned, Peanuts Lowrey singled to left, Cavarretta reaching third and Peanuts second when the ball got away from Treadway. Paul Gillespie lined out, but Merullo singled to center, scoring Cavaretta and Lowrey with the tying runs. Vandenberg and Hack walked, loading the bases. Then Johnson made the fans forget his fumble fits by doubling to right, scoring Merullo and Vandenberg to give the Cubs a 5 to 3 lead which prevailed to the finish.

The Cubs made their first run of

BRAVES DEFEAT CARDS TWICE, 3 TO 1 AND 5 TO 3

Win 2d Game in 10th; Holmes Hits 15th Homer

St. Louis, Mo., July 15 (AP)—Tommy Holmes hit his 15th home run of the season while Johnny Hutchings held the St. Louis Cardinals to six hits as the Boston Braves took a 3 to 1 decision in the first game of a double header today at Sportsman's Park. Ken Burkhardt, trying for his 10th victory, was charged with the loss.

Cooper was jeered loudly by the St. Louis fans when he entered the game in the last half of the ninth inning, replacing Bill Lee, former Phillie pitcher who started the second game.

Tommy Holmes was held hitless for the eighth time this year in the second game by three Cardinal pitchers.

The Braves scored two runs in the 10th inning to win the second game, 5 to 3.

REDS, 6-3; PHILS, 1-1

Cincinnati, O., July 15 (AP)—Vern Kennedy survived a ninth inning rally by his former teammates today as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 3 to 1, in the second game of a double header. Cincinnati took the first game, 6 to 1.

Kennedy, in winning his second Red victory, kept out of trouble until the ninth when, with one out, he walked three men, forcing in Pinch Hitter Jimmy Foxx, who had singled. The Philadelphia rally ended as Jimmy Wasdell flied out to Catcher Al Unser and Vance Dinges rolled out. The first game Charley Schanz hit four Red batters before Foxx relieved him in the sixth and silenced the Cincinnati bats for the remainder of the game.

NEWS OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE

VARIETY STORE PLAN HELPS GI OPEN BUSINESS

Capital of $13,000 Is Needed at Start

BY ANTHONY WIRRY

[This is the eighth article in a series outlining opportunities for returning war veterans.]

A comprehensive and tested plan which eliminates most of the guesswork in opening and operating variety and dry goods stores is being offered business minded war veterans by Butler Brothers, a Chicago company which is a national distributor of general merchandise.

The plan is designed to aid the veteran who contemplates an initial investment of $13,000 or more, and offers a choice of "at least several hundred locations" which will be opened in communities of all sizes in all parts of the country when merchandise and materials become available.

Many Factors Considered

After the veteran has arranged his capital requirements and has decided whether he prefers to operate a variety or a dry goods store, the company begins to set up the business. The first step is the choice of a location. This is selected after careful study of many factors, including probable sales volume and profit, business conditions in the particular community, size of the store, length of the lease, and the most thriving or "100 per cent block."

When this study is completed, the company designs the store, selecting a suitable store front and appropriate fixtures and lighting equipment. Aisles and counters also are arranged. On opening day the company provides the assistance of an experienced supervisor.

This is followed with promotional programs, personnel training, and guidance in financing, sales, purchases, stock keeping, and other operations. The plan then tapers down to periodic visits by store superintendents who review all phases of the business and make suggestions.

All Stores Home Owned

Variety stores opened under this plan are called Ben Franklin Stores, the dry goods outlets are known as Federated stores. In both cases they are home owned. The only relationship between them and Butler Brothers is an agreement assuring Butler Brothers an adequate and permanent outlet for its merchandise, and guaranteeing the store owner that he will receive the merchandise and services necessary to a sound business. The company said the services are provided for a reasonable fee and enable the recipient to "compete with any kind of store."

It estimated that the smallest variety store requires an initial investment of $13,900 and should do $25,000 of business the first year with a net return to the owner of $2,940 including salary. In the third year the return should climb to $4,260 on a volume of $32,000, the company said.

Capital of $18,800 Needed

The smallest dry goods store, projecting an annual volume of $35,000, requires $18,800 in original outlay. In the first year such an establishment should yield the owner a return of $3,955; in the third year, $5,180.

Butler Brothers, the sponsor of this plan, is owned by 17,000 stockholders, and had consolidated sales of $121,017,354 in 1943. It employs nearly 6,000 persons and has warehouses and offices in strategic locations thruout the country. It carries 20,000 items in stock.

SENATORS SEEK 65 CENT HOURLY WAGE MINIMUM

Washington, D. C., July 15 (AP)—A senate labor subcommittee indorsed today a resolution declaring it is the sense of congress that any hourly wage below 65 cents is "substandard."

It recommended that congress give early consideration to amending the fair labor standards act "with a view to raising the statutory minimum wage and broadening the coverage of the act." That law fixes 40 cents as the minimum wage which may be paid by businesses engaged in interstate commerce.

The resolution — introduced by Senators Pepper [D., Fla.], La Follette [Prog., Wis.], and Johnson [D., S. C.]—would direct specifically that the war labor board shall consider any wage under 65 cents an hour substandard. At present, WLB regards anything under 55 cents an hour as substandard and under it can order, in dispute cases, wages raised to at least that level.

PAN AM. RADIO MEN THREATEN AIR LINE STRIKE

Miami, Fla., July 15 (AP)—Representatives of the Latin American division of the Flight Radio Officers Association of Pan American Airways said today a notice of intention to strike at 5 p. m., Wednesday, unless contract demands were met, had been mailed to the air line.

The strike if called, would affect Pan American trips from Miami, New Orleans, and Brownsville, Tex., to Central and South America.

Members of the union's contract committee said they were not under contract with the air line, and so are not affected by the Smith-Connally act requiring 30 day notice of intention to strike. The independent union is asking for an increased pay scale with a $450 a month maximum after five years, compared with the present scale ranging up to $350; double time for all night flying, and overtime after 90 hours a month flying time.

OPPOSES MOVE TO SELL STOCK TO EXECUTIVES

Bloomingdale, director and stockholder of Federated Department Stores, Inc., yesterday wrote common stock holders urging them to vote against a company proposal setting aside 125,000 common shares for purchase by certain executives, including Fred Lazarus Jr. and Walter Rothschild. COLORADO UTILITY

My attention has been called to Public Service Company of Colorado common stock. I shall appreciate a report on it.—G. B.

The entire common stock issue of Public Service of Colorado, 875,000 shares, $20 par, was sold by Cities Service Power and Light company in 1943, in compliance with a securities and exchange commission order. An underwriting group resold it to investors at $25 a share. Recent over-the-counter quotations were about $8 above that price.

The company supplies electricity to Denver and about 130 other Colorado communities, and gas—mostly purchased natural gas—to Denver and several other cities and towns. A subsidiary serves Cheyenne, Wyo., with electricity and natural gas.

Earnings as applied to the present stock capitalization show substantial profits available for the common stock each year since 1929, ranging from a low of $1.97 a share in 1933 to a high of $4.28 in 1940. In recent years the earnings were: 1944, $2.27; 1943, $4.27; 1942, $3.82; 1941, $2.95. Last year's decrease was caused by increased allowances for excess profits tax. Gross revenue rose from $17,441,000 in 1939 to $22,933,000 in 1944.

Common dividends are paid at the rate of $1.65 a year. Outstanding are $6,219,900 first preferred stock in three series with cumulative dividend rates of $7, $6, and $5, and $48,798,800 funded debt.

The properties are near the Colorado-Big Thompson and Seminole power projects of the bureau of reclamation. Part of the output is purchased by the company and its Wyoming subsidiary.

Restive British Told Luxury Goods Are Out

BY JOSEPH CERUTTI

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, July 15—Altho public agitation against shopping queues and shortages is spreading to many parts of the country, Britons were warned by an official spokesman last week that they will continue to do without luxuries. They were told that up to one-fifth of the national income must be spent on capital equipment during the next few years to restore industry and the export trade.

The estimate that 15 to 20 per cent of the national income will be needed for capital equipment was made by Harold Mackintosh, chairman of the national savings committee, speaking at Cambridge. Russia, in carrying out her five year plan before the war spent 25 per cent of her income on capital equipment, he recalled, whereas Britain's expenditure amounted to only 3 per cent.

Can't Have Everything

"We cannot have a plenitude of comforts and luxuries and have the machines, factories, imports of raw materials, and all other things necessary to reconstruct the resources of our country to the point of efficiency which will be demanded of us if we are to survive," he said.

Oliver Lyttelton, president of the board of trade and minister of production, notified Britain's domestic consumers that for anything beyond minimum needs they must yield priority to the export trade.

The weekly Economist approved Lyttelton's statement, tho it predicted increasing difficulty in enforcing restrictions in the face of the growing public pressure for relaxation of controls and release of supplies.

Termed Most Fortunate

The Economist deplored the campaign against queues on the basis that it would be wrong to divert supplies and labor to domestic consumers at the expense of more urgent demands [the export trade]. Describing Britain as the "most fortunate nation in the old world" it said that "to grumble too much about queues now is to insure that there never again is abundance in this crowded island."

Government and business agree generally that the country must export at least 50 per cent more than in 1938 to obtain imports needed for reconstruction and maintenance of living standards.

Industrialists, however, complain that the government has produced no specific plan for achieving the vast expansion in foreign sales.

British companies increasingly have been taking independent action to obtain information regarding the potential size of overseas markets and the types of goods wished.

AYRES EXPECTS TRADE SNARLS TO EASE LITTLE

Nazis' Defeat Only Shifts Problems

Cleveland, O., July 15 [Special]—Victory in one of two wars is changing the United States' business problems substantially, but it will ease them little, Brig. Gen. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust company, said today in the company's business bulletin.

Ayres said business trips are becoming in many instances nearly impossible, and that by Dec. 31 military freight traffic will interfere increasingly with civilian traffic.

Food Rationing Faltering

Food rationing is operating very poorly, especially in large cities, he said, and present coal shortages could easily become serious. The increased margin requirements for security purchases show the "nervousness of Washington about threats of inflation," he added.

"Our business machine operates smoothly under conditions of free competitive pricing for both goods and services, but when that freedom of necessity is suspended the machine functions badly," Ayres said.

"During the rest of this war period we shall increasingly realize what a planned economy is really like. Our best sample of it is food rationing. Most of its unfortunate features result from faulty planning done last year, and the year before, and the year before that, with results that are now coming increasingly into effect.

Planned Economy Fails

"We have produced the largest harvests in our history, and there exists an abundance of most kinds of food, but the planned economy of its distribution produces most unsatisfactory results."

Reviewing other economic developments, Ayres said prices of stocks, measured in terms of yield, are nearly as high as they were in 1929 when the "greatest of all bull markets reached its climax."

"Even at present prices stocks offer larger returns than the bonds," he said. "That was not the case in 1928, 1929, or 1936."

Industry Map Little Revised by War Boom

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., July 15—The nation's unprecedented 20 billion 300 million dollar expansion of manufacturing facilities during the war has been concentrated largely in areas where similar industries already were established, the war production board reported today. It published a study of the geographic distribution of war plants and other industrial expansion from July 1, 1940, thru May 31, 1944. Enlargement of service facilities was not included.

The report said a much less widespread relocation of industrial plants thruout the United States resulted than might have been the popular belief because economic and strategic considerations required concentration of these facilities in the same states and areas where similar industries had operated before the war.

Speed Main Consideration

Labor supply, transportation, housing and, particularly, the need for speed were the factors restricting war born facilities to the pre-war manufacturing centers.

The WPB analysis gave for the first time details of the locations of the 13,126 plant additions represented in the total valuation of more than 20 billion dollars. Of this sum, 15.8 billion was government financing and 4.5 billion the investment of private funds.

Approximately 19 billion dollars worth of the manufacturing facilities, or 93 per cent, were placed in 179 previously existing manufacturing areas, the WPB disclosed. In 1939, the 451 counties included in these areas had 84 per cent of all the nation's manufacturing wage earners and 81 per cent of the value of products.

Third Placed in 10 Cities

More than one-third, or 7⅛ billion of the total value of facilities authorizations, were located in 10 of the country's leading industrial cities — Chicago, Detroit, New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Houston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, St. Louis, and San Francisco.

The study showed that Ohio led the states with 1,293 facilities and authorizations totaling 1 billion 677 million; Pennsylvania was next with 1,220 authorizations valued at 1 billion 675 million; Michigan third with 1,145 authorizations totaling 1 billion 549 million; Illinois fourth with 1,067 authorizations totaling 1 billion 490 million; New York fifth with 1,111 authorizations valued at 1 billion 383 million, and Texas sixth with 441 authorizations totaling 1 billion 259 million.

WHAT BECOMES OF UNION FUNDS IF PLANT SHUTS?

President of UAW Local Gives Explanation

The war plant closes. The wheels stop. The workers are fired. The local union folds up. What happens to the money in the union's treasury? Do the union bosses walk off with it?

These questions, two of the many that reconversion and cutbacks in war industry have raised in Chicago, Detroit, Mich., and in other war production centers, were answered yesterday by officers of local union 998, United Automobile Workers [CIO], which held a contract in one of Chicago's largest closed war plants, the Studebaker aircraft engine factory at 5555 Archer av. This ceased operation May 31.

The officers of local 998 said that nobody is going to "walk off" with their union treasury. It will be disposed of legally, they said, according to the terms of the union's constitution if and when the union is disbanded.

Union Functions, President Says

Joe Balas, president of local 998, said that the union will continue to function indefinitely because it still represents about 250 workers. They are maintaining the closed Studebaker plant, which is owned by the Defense Plant corporation. Should the plant be purchased and operated in peace time industry, the local undoubtedly would seek once again to represent its full complement of workers, provided they are in the same trade, Balas explained.

The Studebaker plant operated under a dues check-off system, and some workers were assessed $1 in dues for the month of June, altho the plant closed May 31. A worker who has not labored 40 hours within any given month and who is out of work is entitled to have his dues refunded.

Balas said that many Studebaker workers who presented unemployment compensation papers showing they were unemployed received refunds. Many others, he said, took jobs in plants represented by other UAW locals. In these cases, he said, workers who applied received referral cards to the new locals and their $1 payments were forwarded to the other locals.

Dues Tax Deductible

Still others, he said, had paid dues far in advance. Some of these, Balas explained, will prefer to keep their membership in local 998 alive and will continue to pay dues as long as the local exists, on the chance they may work under its jurisdiction again. Some workers, he said, hold paid-up cards in both CIO and AFL unions in the expectation of some day changing jobs. Union dues are deductible from federal income taxes.

Local 998 has money in its treasury, its officers insisted, but they refused to discuss how much or whether any of it was earmarked for payment to the UAW international. The union operates a store front office at 5361 Archer ave., and at least two clerks were on duty there yesterday. Reduced dues income and overhead may eat into the treasury, if the local continues long to operate.

Company and Union Fund

One officer opined that any money left in the local treasury after the kick-back of dues to workers and to other locals probably would be surrendered to the international, if the local folds up.

Local 998 has a fund, estimated at $17,000, collected from workers and matched by the company, which is held in a joint bank account with the company. This fund was earmarked to get presents for drafted union members, but because of the Studebaker shutdown, company and union have decided to put it to another use.

Balas said it will be used to buy rehabilitation equipment for army and navy hospitals in this area. Both Balas and a company official said that purchase of this equipment is now being worked out, and that the fund will be used for equipment, machinery, and materials that will help wounded war veterans fit themselves for useful occupations in civilian life.

Burglary Suspects

Louis Pretzie, 27, of 819 S. Carpenter st., a city fireman, and Howard Kosch, 31, of 1323 S. Fairfield av., a laborer, arrested early yesterday while robbing the apartment of Judith Sanford, a night club hostess, at 43 E. Walton st., were being questioned yesterday by E. Chicago av. police in connection with other recent burglaries.

The two were seized by Detectives Joseph Borcia, Leo Kelly, and James Fleming, who said the two had several suit cases filled with loot. Police were called by neighbors who heard a noise in the apartment and knew that Miss Sanford was away.

Police said Kosch admitted he had served six years in Joliet prison on a robbery conviction.

EFFECT OF ODT'S PULLMAN BAN TO HIT EARLY TODAY

Chicago's railway stations reported comparatively little confusion or dislocation last night as a result of the office of defense transportation ban on Pullman travel for trips of less than 450 miles, which went into effect at noon.

On most trains leaving the city, travel was reported lighter than usual but railway officials said the full effect of the order would not fall on the traveling public until early today, due to removal of Pullman cars from many late trains.

Hiawatha Train Jammed

The Union station reported its lightest day in weeks, altho the North Woods Hiawatha on the Milwaukee, with 700 sets, left with 1,040 passengers aboard. The Illinois Central station reported a normal day, with some passengers appearing with Pullman reservations which had been cancelled. They left on day coaches. A similar situation prevailed at the La Salle st. station.

A navy troop train from Philadelphia was switched from the Pennsylvania to the Rock Island railroad tracks yesterday for departure to an undisclosed western destination. The 250 sailors rode in style in 10 Pullman cars, one man to a berth.

Lt. R. A. B. Jervis and Chief C. P. Hauer, who were in charge, said the trip in air conditioned cars was comfortable and that the men had few complaints. Hauer, who has made 50 troop trips, 20 across the continent, said it was the most comfortable in his experience.

Hooked behind the 10 sleepers, however, were three coaches occupied by 8th air force men from Fort Dix, N. J., who were traveling the shorter distance to Sioux Falls, S. D. The air men said they were not crowded.

Remove 895 Pullmans

The Pullman company set about removing 895 cars from the regularly scheduled trains leaving Chicago, freeing them for assignment to troop trains. Redeployment of troops from Europe to the Pacific has created an exceptionally heavy demand for sleepers and civilians have been told not to expect any relief from the ODT order for at least six months.

Trainmen on the Pennsylvania railroad's "Admiral," which goes to Pittsburgh and New York City, reported the lightest day coach loads in several weeks. Most of these passengers were traveling to Ohio cities less than 450 miles from Chicago. All Pullman space on the train was reserved by persons traveling more than 450 miles.

North Western officials said all Pullmans had been removed from northbound trains departing late at night, except one car for Duluth. Regularly scheduled sleepers to Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, Ia., also have been removed.

Tickets, but No Reservations

Asked whether coaches would be added to replace the Pullmans, one official said: "I don't know where we'd get them." He said one coach could accommodate passengers from two to three Pullmans, but the short haul passengers probably would have to double up with regular coach passengers in the same space.

It is still possible to buy Pullman tickets to cities within the 450 mile radius, "but you won't get any reservations," one Pullman official said. The space on transcontinental and long haul trains is allotted to persons traveling more than 450 miles.

BROOKFIELD ZOO ANIMALS HAVE A 'POST-WAR PLAN'

To visit the Brookfield zoo of the post-war era will be like stepping into the pages of "Alice in Wonderland" if plans now under way can be fulfilled.

Preliminary drawings call for a man made mountain for animals of the American west and barless cages for apes. Plastics, glasses, and other materials developed during the war are being tested for use in post-war construction at the zoo.

Mountain and Prairie

Edwin H. Clark, architect for the zoo, said he has made drawings for a 170 foot mountain to be populated by sheep and goats and to be bounded by a prairie on which moose, elk, buffalo, and deer will graze. This panorama of fauna as seen by early settlers in the west is to be located at the west end of the zoo property beyond Salt creek. Deep moats in the yard will separate the animals from the public.

Stanley Field, head of the building committee of the Chicago Zoological association which directs the zoo, said that gorillas and chimpanzees, now caged in the monkey house, will be moved to a new building which will provide outdoor summer facilities and sunshine during the winter months.

Air Conditioning Planned

Plastic glass, now used in plane turrets, will replace bars to isolate the large apes from the public if the material withstands durability tests, Field disclosed. He said apes are susceptible to lung disorders and need sunshine. The new glass thus would serve a double purpose and visitors no longer would be obliged to peer thru bars to watch the animals.

A building to house trophy collections and a zoological library has been proposed by John T. McCutcheon, president of the board of directors. Other scheduled improvements include the enlargement and air conditioning of the small mammal house and the grounding of electrical wires.
